KIDNAPERS THREATEN GREENOUGHS

NEW GARRETT WITNESSS IS FOUND

Foley Shrouds Milton Aid in Mystery on Eve of Dramatic Trial's Opening

Judge Patrick M. Keating will preside at the Oliver B. Garrett trial tomorrow, it was definitely determined today, when he gave orders for the handling of the courtroom to Deputy Sheriff Pierce and a corps of assistants.

A mystery witness, identity carefully guarded by the State, loomed today on the eve of the trial of Oliver B. Garrett, his wife and Miss Lillian V. Hatch that all of Suffolk County will watch tomorrow.

The never-before-mentioned witness is a resident of Milton, but Dist.-Atty. William A. Foley carefully withheld the name, address and even age of the newcomer.

Testimony hitherto unrevealed will be given by the witness, he admitted.

The news of the new witness became known after Foley made a trip to Hilton with a Boston police inspector and spent several hours at the new party's home.

CURLEY URGES 5-DAY WEEK ON CITY JOB

Tells Council That Boston Has a Surplus of $1,250,000; $40,400,000 Plan Favored

Boston should lead in establishing, officially, a five-day working week for its employes.

The nation, following Boston's lead, should adopt the five-day program universally, thus aiding in relief of unemployment.

These were highlights in recommendations and reviews in the address of Mayor Curley this afternoon before the City Council at the start of a new city year.

Despite a "bad year," the mayor said, Boston has a surplus of $1,250,000, although it has done more, comparatively, than any other city to relieve the distressed, both financially and through municipal projects.

Rapid transit systems, he said, should be constructed, at a cost of $40,400,000, from South Huntington ave. to East Boston and from Harvard ave., Brighton, to Arlington.

MACHINES OUST 3,000,000.

With regard to the five-day week project, the mayor said:

"I recommend for your earnest consideration a study during the present year of ways and means of adoption in 1932 of a five-day working week for all persons in the employ of the city of Boston.

"In all matters for the amelioration of conditions that bear heavily upon the workers the city should be the leader and not the follower. The substitution of automatic machinery for labor in every field of activity has, in the past 10 years, displaced in the United States approximately 3,000,000 workers, and competent authorities estimate that a like number will be displaced during the succeeding 10 years.

"Inventive genius and scientific development in the machine field are essential to the progress of the nation and should be utilized for the benefit of all rather than for the enrichment of a few. A reduction in the days of the working week so that the machinery may continue to be the slave of man rather than have man become the slave of the ma-

U. S. Court Holds Dry Act Valid

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—Solicitor General Thacher today asked the Supreme Court to advance for hearing on an early date the Government's appeal from the decision of Judge Clark of New Jersey holding invalid the Eighteenth Amendment.

New York, Jan. 5 (AP)—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals held today that the Eighteenth Amendment was constitutionally adopted. It made its ruling in a decision unanimously affirming the conviction of Louis E. Thibault of Windsor, Vt., accused of possessing and selling two pints of whiskey.

The appeals court thus took a contrary view to that expressed in Newark, N. J., recently by Federal Judge William Clark, who held the Eighteenth Amendment was illegally adopted.

Harry B. Amey, United States attorney in Vermont, represented the government at the hearing on appeal, while Selden Bacon and Daniel F. Cohalan, who assisted in presenting the case of William Sprague before Judge Clark, also appeared for Thibault.

The opinion of the court, written by Judge Manton, said in part:

"In national prohibition cases the Supreme Court squarely held

NEW ATTACK ON DRY LAW

A new attack on the legality of the prohibition amendment in Boston was referred to the Circuit Court of Appeals for a decision by Federal Judge James A. Lowell. The jurist recently overruled a similar motion. Hearing arguments of Atty. Benjamin Greenwood for Joseph F. O'Connor and Bernard E. McCormack, both of Worcester, he said: "I am not interested in hearing technicalities. But if you want to try it on some other judge, go ahead."

Man Is Fined $5 for Working on Sunday

Frank Camps, a Boston house painter, was fined $5 in Malden District Court today under the old blue laws for working on the Sabbath. SENATE BOOSTS DROUTH FUND $15,000,000

Relief to the Farmers May Be Held Up by Battle on Food Loans

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—Congress voted appropriations for drouth relief today, but Senate and House differences must be adjusted before the lending to sufferers can begin.

The House approved the $45,000,000 figure for seed, feed and fertilizer loans required by the administration. The Senate not only did this, but—on motion of Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas—added $15,000,000 more, to be advanced for food purchases by farmers whose crops were hit.

Record votes were taken.

Senator Caraway's amendment, providing food-plan amendment. If it refuses to accept that, as seems likely in view of strong administration objections to the principle involved and if the Senate persists in its stand—then a conference between the two branches will be in order.

SEEK QUICK ACTION.

Efforts are excpted to be made to send the legislation to the White House as quickly as possible.

C. F. Warburton, secretary of the national drouth relief committee, testified in congressional hearings on it that loans would be made available within a week after the President signs the appropriation bill.

House Republican leaders announced they would resist all efforts to have included in appropriation funds for food.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the majority floor leader, said, "Of course, we cannot permit the inclusion of $15,000,000 for the purchase of food."

On the other hand, Democratic

Senator Flees the Front Lines

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

We can never remember whether it was Cicero or Cato who demanded that Carthage must fall.

But he was a patriot. He was for his country right or wrong. And sometimes he merged 'em.

Which is why we cannot understand Senator King's demand that our marines quit Nicaragua.

Eight boys were ambushed and killed there last week. While they were stringing telegraph wires. Which demands the old optician's test of an eye for an optic.

It's easy enough for a senator to box the compass in a swivel chair and to lurk beneath the protecting shade of a mahogany desk. But a big indoors man should stick to his backgammon and allow the marines to settle this matter in their own rough, manly way.

The senator claims we are protecting investments with bayonets. Which ain't a bad idea. We'll join the marines before we start buying on margin again.

Ford officials announced that the men recalled to their two plants brought the total employment to the point where it stood when they closed for inventory Dec. 13. The 6000 men recalled to the Cadillac factory was said to show a gain of from 500 to 750 men over the number employed when the factory closed Dec. 18. The 4500 men returned to the Flint Buick plant brought the total employment there to 8375, according to E. T. Strong, president.

NOTE TO WIFE SAYS BABY WILL BE STOLEN

Police Guard Beacon St. Home of Wealthy Ex-Harvard Football Captain

An attempt to extort $2500 from Mrs. Malcolm W. Greenough of 416 Beacon st., Back Bay, wife of a former Harvard football captain and social leader, by threatening to kidnap her baby, was revealed today by the police.

The Greenough home is under police guard and two inspectors are investigating clues contained in the letter which carried the threat.

Every precaution is being taken to protect Mrs. Greenough and the child, born on December 13 last, as well as an older child, a boy of four.

The threatening message was received by Mrs. Greenough three days ago. Her husband promptly reported it to Deputy Police Supt. James McDevitt who kept the matter secret, pending search for the sender.

THREATEN OTHER VIOLENCE

When news of the threats became known today, police officials admitted their truth, but continued to withhold details.

It was learned, however, that the writer of the note demanded that $2500 be placed at a certain spot and besides threatening to steal the child made veiled threats of other acts if the police were notified.

Mrs. Greenough is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Parkman, Jr., wife of the state senator from the Back Bay district. Her sister is Mrs. James J. Storrow, Jr. Before her marriage she was Miss Katherine Rotch, one of the leading debutantes of the 1923 season.

Her husband, "Mal" Greenough of Harvard gridiron fame, was captain of the 1924 Crimson eleven and one of the best centers that ever roamed the Stadium turf, according to the experts.

PUBLIC GAINS BY RAIL MERGERS, SAYS REPRESENTATIVE HOCH

COMPETITION STIMULATES BUSINESS

Superficial Study of 4-Line Plan Shows No Traffic Restriction

By HOMER HOCH

Written expressly for Universal Service

Washington, Jan. 5—The proposal to unite the railroads in eastern territory into four great systems is a step of vast importance in railroad history.

I am glad to see the roads agree on a definite plan. Progress in the Eastern situation is highly desirable from every standpoint. The present uncertainty has retarded development and any sound solution would greatly help to promote business recovery.

NEED COMPETITION

The question of whether there be four or five Eastern systems is far less important than the question of whether vigorous competition be preserved among well balanced systems.

On the face of it, it appears to me that the pending proposal would promote a vigorous competition. All four systems will have access to New York; there will be strong competition at the lake ports, and also at other principal ports on the Atlantic.

I have never favored consolidations which would restrict competition, and developments may show that there are some details in which the present proposal is objectionable from the standpoint of traffic competition.

If the four systems are kept separate and any collusive agreements between them are prevented, the public should have the advantage of a much more virile and effective competition than now exists. Competition between strong, well balanced systems is much more in the public interest than any suppression between a great number of weak roads.

From the standpoint of the Middle West, particularly the territory to the west of Kansas City, the present proposal seems better than the plan suggested by the commission. The commission's proposal called for a new system to be built up out of the Wabash with Eastern connections.

Under the four system proposal the Wabash would be a part of the Pennsylvania and the Chicago & Alton a part of the Delaware & Ohio, and this would put two strong competing systems, the Pennsylvania and the Delaware & Ohio, directly into Kansas City.

LAW INADEQUATE

While present law gives full authority in the premises to the Interstate Commerce Commission, I think some revision of the law regarding consolidations is needed.

We need law to improve the corporate means of carrying consolidations into effect, to protect the rights of minority stockholders and in some other respects.

It cannot be too often stated that the public interest must be the paramount consideration in all consolidation proposals. Strong competition must be preserved between systems able to contend on a common ground as to facility and traffic service and where this is not possible, the necessary service must be protected. The rights of labor must be safeguarded and the rights of the general public safeguarded in every possible way.

The roads should not be permitted to capitalize the good will which may come solely as the result of consolidation. Instead the importance of proper adjustments must be kept constantly in mind.

The consolidation question cannot be passed upon in the abstract. It comes down to whether any particular consolidation does meet the conditions in protection and promotion of the public interest.

I believe that proper consolidations into well balanced systems, strongly competing within territories would not only give to the public better service and in the end cheaper service but would make much easier the very difficult and complex problem of rate regulation.

Small Roads Approve Eastern Rail Merger

Washington, Jan. 5 (USI)—Executives of the smaller railroads to be abanrhed in the merger of all eastern railways into four great systems have agreed to the plan and will expedite approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was learned officially today.

While hearings will probably not begin until the latter part of the week, it is learned that there will be no opposition from any of the railroads to the general plan.

It was stated officially that the consolidation has become an economic necessity, and in the view of President Hoover and his advisers forms the keystone of recovery from the depression. It was pointed out that for almost 30 years the railroads have been at a standstill and have been unable to compete with motor transportation and the pipe lines. There is also a vast amount of duplication, where rail systems virtually run parallel, and there is a great loss where they are shut off from entering the great shipping centers, it was stated.

Curley Urges 5-Day Week, $40,400,000 'L' Tubes

PROUD OF SURPLUS

"The adoption generally of the five-day week should prove beneficial to all the people and is worthy of our more serious thought."

The mayor's 3000-word address was broadcast over the radio, the first such broadcast from the City Council chamber.

He told the city councilors and the crowded galleries that the surplus of $1,200,000 in the city treasury at the close of 1930, is the result of a financial policy adopted by him in 1922, during a previous administration.

It is a remarkable showing, he asserted, because the business depression resulted in great financial demands being made on the city during the year.

More than 300 organizations held conventions here during 1930, he said, and more than $100,000,000 was expended by visitors. The Mayor recommended that the movement to provide a convention city be given every encouragement.

URGES PLANNING BOARD.

Creation of a federal industrial planning board, non-partisan in character, to be composed of economists, representative of the American Federation of Labor, and of the leading industrial establishments of the nation as a means of combatting business depression, was also recommended.

As a result of the work of the city in behalf of public health the death rate from tuberculosis in 1930 was the lowest in history. Diphtheria, which once took an annual toll of 223 lives in this city, caused only 25 fatalities last year, he said.

An additional $3,000,000 will be required for improvements at the Boston City Hospital. Since 1922 approximately $7,000,000 has been spent for new buildings and equipment at that institution and it is now one of the most modern municipal hospitals in the United States.

The maternity building is the largest and most modern in any American city. The out-patient department, formerly housed in a small, ancient structure, is now in a modern 10-story building. An eight-story pavilion for children is soon to be erected.

Many improvements were made in the parks and playgrounds during 1930, the mayor said. A stadium which seats 10,000 persons was built in South Boston, a rock garden in Franklin Park, a bathhouse is being built at L st., improvements were made at Muddy river, and field houses and shelters were erected at 12 playgrounds.

PLANS GREATER PARK.

The sum of $100,000 has been expended for improvements at World War Memorial Park, East Boston, the mayor said, and he hopes to get legislative action which will permit the spending of $1,000,000 for the purpose of providing a marine park which will extend to the Winthrop line.

A municipal golf course, comprising nearly 7,000,000 feet of land in West Roxbury and Hyde Park, is under construction and this has provided employment for more than 300 men, the Mayor said.

The Mayor said that he hopes to build a "double-barrelled roadway" through the municipal park system; a boulevard in South Boston from the Strandway to Castle Island; a motor yacht basin in Pleasure Bay and lockers, field houses and concrete stands for playgrounds. He also favors tree planting in residential streets wherever possible.

Work on the $5,000,000 Governor Sq. subway extension is progressing satisfactorily and more than 400 men are employed on that project, he said.

The contract for the $16,000,000 East Boston traffic tunnel will be ready for advertising during the present month. This project is the most forward step taken in traffic facilities in the history of the city, the Mayor said.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS

Boston Harbor will be dredged and widened during the coming year by the government.

The traffic signal systems installed in Boston during the year have been a success both from the standpoint of public safety and of reducing delay in traffic, he said.

The public works department during the year expended $6,598,875 for contract work. Of this $3,284,643 was for the reconstruction of existing streets and for the installation of granolithic sidewalks. This sum is 100 per cent in excess of the amount expended for this purpose in any previous year.

A new ferryboat and the Congress st. and L st. bridges involved the expenditure of $1,491,000.

The Soldiers' Relief Department expended $425,000 for the care of needy veterans and their families during 1930.

CURLEY COUNCIL IN LOVE FEAST

Mayor James M. Curley and the members of the City Council today broke bread at the Parker House, the annual feast of the city fathers together, in honor of another municipal year.

Thanks for the co-operation of the past year were passed by the body and the head and Mayor Curley reviewed the conduct of the city business during the past year, revealing for the first time that 2000 gold pieces were given needy families at Christmas time, of which 300 came from the fund raised by police for the unemployed.

"If we work together as we have the past year we will have behind us an enviable record," the mayor said.

William G. Lynch, retiring president of the council, responded by telling the city head that the council enjoyed the mayor's leadership and because of it, Boston would be the first to rise out of the depression.

Formal attire was the order of the lay and the white mace of the city messenger was included in the pomp and ceremony.

ARMY BILL FOR $446,000,000 GOES TO HOUSE

Measure Includes $95,000,000 for Flood Control and Rivers and Harbors

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—An appropriation of $446,024,000 was allowed the war department for maintenance of the army and prosecution of waterway projects next fiscal year in the annual supply bill received today by the House.

The military activities drew $334,856,000, including $134,864,000 for pay, while engineering activities received $111,067,000, of which $60,000,000 was designated for rivers and harbors, $35,000,000 for flood control on the Mississippi and $1,000,000 for Sacramento river flood control.

The measure carried $390,000 less than appropriations for the current year, and was $4,316,000 below the burget bureau estimates. The pay allocation was for a force of 118,000 men.

BAN ON WRITERS.

A legislative provision would prohibit payment of salaries to officers on the active list who are employed or engaged in any manner with a publication carrying paid advertisements. This is directed at officers who have been writing for magazines and undoubtedly will meet with opposition in both Senate and House.

Among the large allotments for military purposes were $31,915,000 for the air corps, which is expected to practically complete the five-year expansion program; $92,061,100 for subsistence, clothing, equipment, transportation, and construction at military posts under the housing program; $10,816,000 for ordnance, including repairs at arsenals; $33,058,000 for the militia, and $2,666,000 for the military academy at West Point.

Citizens military training camps received $6,771,000, while the organized reserves were given $20,765,000. Hearings on the bill before the House appropriations committee developed that since the middle of 1925 the government has spent $566,986,801 on aviation activities of all sorts.

COST OF AVIATION.

The figure was presented by Maj.-Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the army air corps. Of these expenditures for his branch since 1925 at $272,838,537.

Costs of other government air activities included: Post office, $35,127,716; navy, $236,075,151; commerce department, $13,432,161.

Included in the $31,915,740 allotment to the air corps is $200,000, with research to determine whether the corps should build a "tin can," metal-clad dirigible. Four hundred thousand dollars also will be spent to purchase three non-rigid airships.

For new airplanes, the department was allowed $15,296,231.

By June of 1932, Gen. Fechet said, the army will have on hand or ordered 1582 useful airplanes, while the national guard will have 152 more.

Shooting Victim

BODY OF SLAIN GIRL MISSING

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5—The body of Beulah Limerick, "whoopee club" girl whose mysterious murder has aroused the entire city, was reported missing today as four men, one a police officer and another a brother of the dead girl, were in custody in connection with the case.

According to reports, the body was claimed at an undertaking parlor and consigned to Pope's Creek for burial. Investigators, however, reported no trace of the body could be found.

It was not known the girl had been slain until the undertaker discovered a small bullet wound in her head. The bullet was of 25 caliber and two pistols of the same caliber, found in possession of Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, directed suspicion toward him.

A ballistics expert, however, stated that although two exploded .25-caliber shells, found after the murder, were fired from the gun with which the girl was slain, they were not fired from either of the two guns taken from Patrolman Langdon.

Langdon was placed in custody when it was learned he was on duty outside the girl's house when she was slain.

Langdon steadfastly denies killing the girl and says he met her only once, when he called at her home to tell her that her parties were too gay.

In addition to Langdon, the slain girl's brother, Vernon; Richard Reed, a roomer in her home, and William Paddy, who escorted her home from a dance last week, are being held.

Women Trampled as Police Lines Give Way; Many Injured in Crush

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Paris, Jan. 5—The crowds which turned out to view the body of Marshal Joffre grew to such proportions late today that police lines gave way. Women were trampled and the pressure shattered windows in the Ecole Militaire.

The body was lying in state in the chapel of the famous French war college.

Order was restored after half an hour. A great many were injured during the crush.

UNIFORM OF ENGINEERS

The marshal was dressed in the uniform of the engineers, in which branch of the army he first saw service 60 years ago.

About his form was wrapped the long black dolman cape he wore in the crucial days of 1914. It was draped to cover the stump of his left leg, amputated in a forlorn effort to save his life.

On the marshal's breast was the military medal, but on 19 cushions ranged about his bier were the countless decorations he had won during his many years of military service. His marshal's baton reposed on a stand in front of his bed.

From 9 a. m., when the doors of the chapel were thrown open to the public, a constant line of visitors filed past to pay their last respects to the dead warrior.

SIMPLE CEREMONY

With a simple ceremony, the body was brought to the chapel from the clinic of St. Jean de Dieu earlier in the day.

Four guards of honor and a color bearer stood at the bier throughout the day. They were relieved every hour.

This was the first time the chapel had been used for such a ceremonial in 100 years.

same month, their wedding being a big society event.

They were married at the Emmanuel Church by the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton school, which Greenough attended before entering Harvard.

The letter received by Mrs. Greenough, according to police officials is almost identical with one received three years ago by Mrs. Anna Coleman Ladd, noted sculptress of Clarendon st., Back Bay.

OTHERS THREATENED.

Mrs. Ladd was told that her daughter, Vernon Abbott Ladd, would be disfigured if she did not pay $50,000.

At that time police reported having traced the letter to the same person who sent a similar missive to Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet, two years previous. The alleged writer was arrested and tried but the jury disagreed.

The letter sent to Mrs. Greenough is in the hands of handwriting experts to ascertain if the penmanship is the same as that in the earlier threats.

When the authorization measure was before the House, Representative Garner of Texas, the Democratic leader, led the fight for the food provision. Tilson, however, said the Senate amendment undoubtedly would be stricken from the measure in conference.

Little debate preceded the Senate action on the Caraway amendment. Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, and Barkley, Kentucky, spoke in behalf and Chairman Jones of the appropriations committee opposed it but appeared willing to let it go to conference.

The conference committee on the original bill to authorize the drouth funds struck out a similar Senate provision.

Warsaw, Jan. 5 (INS)—Despite a mishap 60 miles north of here, when she smashed the undercarriage of her plane in making a forced landing yesterday, Miss Amy Johnson, British aviator, was understood today to intend to continue her much opposed flight to Peiping, China.

Leaving Berlin Sunday, the pretty 23-year-old girl was driven by the wind to the north of her objective, Warsaw. When she turned about she ran into a heavy fogbank and finally made a forced landing at Amelin, near Krasnoshin.

$543,370 TO ENFORCE LAW IS SOUGHT

Woodcock to Send Five More Sleuths to New England; 500 Asked for Year

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—An immediate increase of 130 dry agents in the prohibition bureau's field service was recommended to the House today in the first deficiency appropriation bill.

The measure, reported by the appropriation committee, carried $543,370 for the bureau. Besides the additional agents, who are the first of 500 requested by Director Woodcock for the next fiscal year, it would provide 48 investigators, 24 instructors and more than 50 miscellaneous employes.

FIVE MORE FOR N. E.

The agents to be added, Woodcock believes, represent the number that can be absorbed before July 1. At present the bureau has about 1400 agents.

Of the allotment, $343,300 for the agents and instructors represents increased activities of the bureau, while $200,070 is due to reorganization following the transfer of the bureau from the Treasury, which retained the industrial alcohol bureau.

"Our organization right now is depleted in agents' places," Woodcock testified in hearings before the committee. "We have about 1400 today. That is probably a great deal short of what is the normal complement. . . . this 130 is the estimate of the number that we can get in and get appointed.

"We have said that we will put five of them in the New England district; 23 in New York, 18 in the third district, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware; 11 in the fourth district, in which Washington is located.

$10,000 FOR PAMPHLET.

"Ten would go to the fifth district; 11 in the sixth district; 21 in the seventh (Illinois) district; 10 in the eighth; six in the ninth; four in the tenth; six in the eleventh, and five in the twelfth district, which is the Pacific Coast district."

The deficiency bill also carried $10,000 for prohibition enforcement publicity.

Woodcock explained a research staff conducting a study of all phases of prohibition was putting the information into pamphlet form and distributing it.

FAIR DEAL FOR TAXI DRIVERS IS PROMISED

Hultman Gives Assurance as Protests on New Rules Are Voiced

Fair and impartial application of the new taxicab regulations was promised by Police Commissioner Hultman today at a hearing on the new rules at police headquarters, which was attended by 400 drivers, taxicab company officials and businessmen.

Spokesmen for the cab drivers and the companies voiced protests against certain features of the regulations, notably that which gives all policemen the right to strip a driver of his license, badge and other credentials upon arresting him.

James A. ("Jerry") Watson, former city councilor from Roxbury, provided the chief fireworks when he interrupted a speaker with sidе remarks and was threatened with arrest. Watson was present as a "silk striker."

TOO MUCH POLICE POWER

The new regulations establish maximum and minimum fare rates, increase the number of public stands and give the police broader powers in controlling taxicabs. The hearing was a courtesy to cab owners and the public, not being required by law.

Commissioner Hultman answered most of the complaints made by the various speakers, but promised to take under consideration a possible change in the power given patrolmen and traffic officers to strip drivers of their credentials.

Ralph Schwartz, an attorney, representing the Independent Taxicab Owners' Association, declared:

"We are unalterably opposed to this provision. Policemen can carry out the authority thus given them on a mere whim. It is arbitrary, unreasonable and, I believe unconstitutional."

CALLED TOO DRASTIC

Frank Sawyer, president of the Checker Taxicab Company, branded it as "a pretty drastic regulation." He said he considered it unfair and open to grave abuses.

"The driver has the right of appeal and the company is protected, because another driver can be assigned to operate the arrested driver's cab," said Comr. Hultman.

"Regardless of that, I think it places too much power in the hands of 1700 officers," replied Sawyer. "We believe the power should be reserved for the desk officer at the police station to which the driver is questioned. This would protect everybody better."

A similar protest was made by George J. Naymie, treasurer of the I. T. O. A., who also charged "an awful slaughter of our cab stands, some of the best ones being given to other companies."

COMPLAIN OF TAXES

Sawyer complained that the rules did not state what the license fees would be, and declared cab owners are already taxed excessively. The drivers present laughed when Comr. Hultman retorted that in the future the companies will not have to pay for special stands.

After order was restored, Sawyer said:

"This talk that we pay huge sums for our stands is not true. We pay amazingly little. We estimate that last year it amounted to only 3 per cent of our gross business."

"Well, I can assure you the fees will not amount to 3 per cent of your gross business," replied the police commissioner.

Sawyer also protested against not being permitted to charge for waiting time. He said Boston is the only city where the operator loses revenue by traffic congestion.

Comr. Hultman pointed out in reply to numerous objections that the right of appeal was fully provided for in the regulations.

SAWYER AND COHEN CLASH.

There was a clash between Sawyer and Morris Cohen of the Beacon Hill Taxi Co. when Cohen objected he was doing so well he had received merger offers. Commissioner Hultman ordered Sawyer to sit down when he attempted to fire another broadside at Cohen.

in the defence of the ex-liquor raider.

He announced former U. S. Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher, yesterday, and today said that one and possibly two more may file appearances before the trial gets under way in the morning.

When Attorney Gallagher filed his appearance, however, only the names of Mrs. Florence Garrett, the ex-raider's wife, and Lillian V. Hatch, the other defendant, appeared on it. He declined to explain the reason for the non-appearance of Garrett's name on the slip.

Of the 36 jurors assigned to the first session of Superior Court, where Garrett is scheduled to be tried, 11 were excused today on pleas of business reasons.

Their dismissals from the present term left 25 for that session, but more may be called from the second and third sessions, if it is found necessary tomorrow.

John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Hotel Ritz, and star witness at the attorney-general's hearing, will be either first or one of the first witnesses, according to Dist.-Atty. Foley, after a conference today with Daniel Gillen and Frederick T. Doyle, his assistants, who ill handle the court work.

He said a crew of court workers would prepare the court tonight for the throng that is expected to to storm the doors for the start of the trial.

GIRL WITNESS CALLED.

An anteroom will be set aside for the 60 witnesses of the state and arrangements for press and their assistants will be made so that the crowd will not interfere.

A girl witness, who went to Maine after the State House investigation and later reported she was not inclined to testify at the court trial, may or may not be called, Foley said.

She has been summoned, and if he thinks she is needed will so brought here, but he doubted that the requirements of her testimony would call for any drastic action.

Yesterday Atty. Callahan interviewed several witnesses he plans to call in defense of Garrett.

Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley and his assistants also held a Sunday afternoon conference.

SULLIVAN READY

Sullivan spent both Friday and Saturday afternoon in conference with Gillen and Doyle going over that testimony he offered at the Warner probe of the activities of Garrett.

Sullivan, according to the officials, is in good physical condition and is ready and anxious to testify.

Sullivan will not be forced to appear at the courthouse until the time that he takes the stand. Arrangements have been completed to have him remain at his home until a few minutes before he will be called. He will be rushed to Pemberton sq. in an automobile, accompanied by his two guards, Boston police inspectors.

CHILD HIT BY TRAGEDY HERE

From a lonely house in St. John, N. B., where tragedy twice dwelt through drowning of her parents, a 15-year-old girl came to Boston to live with an aunt she never had seen before.

Little Mary's father was drowned at Bordeaux during the war when his boat went to the bottom.

Last April, her mother, Mrs. Nora Sutton, lost her life in the sea when ice gave way beneath her as she was walking to the mainland from a lighthouse at Sopsarin, Halifax, where she had been visiting the light keeper's wife.

The Nova Scotia, from Liverpool, via St. John's, N. F., and Halifax, N. S., brought in 100 passengers.

England, Ark., Jan. 5 (AP)—A rising tide of hunger, which Saturday moved 300 or more drouth-ridden farmers to sanguinary threats against merchants, promised to be stemmed effectively today as the Red Cross prepared to feed all who asked aid.

Red Cross authorities estimated their immediate allowance would not last longer than tonight, but a statement of future policy was expected today from the relief organization following a hurried conference and visit here of Albert Evans, Red Cross relief director for Arkansas and Henry M. Baker, special representative of the national organization.

A plan for orderly requisitioning of supplies has been issued by local relief authorities. Albert Walls, county Red Cross chairman, yesterday assured needy farmers "nobody was going to starve."

These assurances from relief quarters were believed to have had a steadying influence on farmers in this section, many of them destitute through a combination of economic conditions, drouth and virtual failure of the money crop, cotton.

Science Leads Goosebone Weather Prophet by a Lap

Philadelphia, Jan. 5 (AP)—Science led soothsaying by a windvane and a couple of gadgets today in the weather-guessing sweepstakes between George S. Bliss, government weather bureau expert, and Sam Brunner, veteran goosebone prophet.

The contest is being conducted by a newspaper to determine the comparative accuracy of scientific methods of forecasting as opposed to the barnyard variety involving goosebones, groundhogs, your Uncle Dudley's "rheumatiz" and the like. It began January 1 and is to continue for one month.

The scorecard giving the daily forecasts shows Bliss predicting at an 800 clip and Brunner 800. One full game, in this case a forecast of tomorrow's weather, separates them. Bliss has won four and lost one; Brunner has three wins and two losses. Each was scored with a win and a loss yesterday. Bliss said it would be mostly cloudy, with moderate winds; Brunner that it would be clear and cold. The day was clear, with warm winds.

MUSCLE SHOALS IN POWER GRIP

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—Testimony by Maj.-Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of corps engineers, that the government virtually is "at the mercy" of the Alabama Power Co. in disposing of Muscles Shoals power was made public today by the appropriations committee in reporting the army supply bill to the House.

This point bore directly on the only disagreement remaining between Senate and House conferees on the measure in disposal of the shoals plant. The House delegates have ceded to the Senate on government operation of the power plant, but have held steadfast against the construction of government transmission lines.

Chairman Snell of the House rules committee said he was willing to accept the Senate plan to permit the Government to ask appropriations for power lines later if it finds itself unable to sell current at the power house.

In testimony on the War Department supply bill which totals $354,740 for operating Wilson dam next year, Brown said, the Tennessee Power Co. has "hooked up with the Alabama Power Co. mainly to play with the Alabama Power Co."

"ACID Indigestion" Wrecks Health Blights Careers!

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Can anyone explain to me: If the Boston and State police have authority and duty to continue to enforce the Volstead act instead of leaving this expensive job to the federal officers, who are being paid for this work, what sense is there in voting to repeal the Baby Volstead act?

What does the people's verdict amount to if the State police go right on as though the people said nothing? If any country is in the clutches of unreasonable fanatics it is our glorious U. S. A.

Industry Is Modern Meaning of Swasztika

Editor Boston American:

One of the meanings of Gothic, "Swes-stigas," was something like "Sweet-slinger." Hence, may be the Swasztika-figure represents an old primitive tool for drawing honey by centrifugal force.

A honey-sling on somebody's escutcheon would be almost in line with the beehive on the Utah coat-of-arms, though, of course, the reason for the latter is not enveloped in mystery.

Shields have been emblazoned with simpler decorations than that. And, while the origin of the Swasztika may be obscure, the modern meaning is certainly "industry."

Educator's Life Held Lesson to All Boys

Editor Boston American:

That young man in court the other day who told the judge he never had a chance should read the life of Thomas Okey, emeritus professor of Italian at Cambridge University, England. He is a scholar of renown.

His history is the struggle of a slum boy's triumph over what seemed insurmountable difficulties. Seventy-eight years ago he was born in Spitalfields, Eng., the son of a poor basket maker.

He had only one suit of clothes made by his mother when eight years old and he made that suit last a long time. At 12 years he found himself working at the trade of a basket maker 12 hours a day in the cellar never warmed in winter. He fought all obstacles.

He gradually educated himself studying ancient and modern languages while an apprentice to his father's trade. More could be told. Such lives are inspiring to the youth of today. He never pined. He pushed ahead. He endured everything and he conquered.

New Year's Eve Called "Ordeal of Lawlessness"

Editor Boston American:

It seems to me after reading about New Year's night in Boston that those who said state repeal would bring about an ordeal of lawlessness, said precisely what was true.

The question is, how safe are ordeals of lawlessness? Personally, I always picture the number of great trucks that nightly enter Boston and make their way back into the state during the early morning.

It is not very safe for us who must use the country roads to have truck drivers emerge nightly from "ordeals of lawlessness."

Coolidge and Hoover Hit for Harding Stand

Editor Boston American:

Why should there by opposition by ex-President Coolidge and hesitation on the part of President Hoover, to attend the dedicatory exercises of the mausoleum wherein lie the remains of the late President Warren G. Harding and his lamented wife.

Such is not consonant to a spirit of amity, appreciation for a man who had both men in service to his administration.

Mr. Harding, was to me, a man among men, a good sport, deserving the commendation of a lomb subscribed to by a people's love and admiration.

Hermann Writes Walsh N. E. Opposes Extra Session

Editor Boston American:

I am enclosing herewith a copy of a letter this day written by me to Senators David I. Walsh and Marcus A. Coolidge.

In my opinion, if this sort of news were given publicity instead of all this bally-hoo, the community would be better off. Also, in my opinion, it expresses the voices of the people of Massachusetts and New England as a whole.

J. J. HERMANN.

The letter to Sen. Walsh follows:

Honorable David I. Walsh,
United States Senator,
Washington, D. C.

I hope you will not think I am forward in stating the opinion of the people with whom I come in contact: that they are very urgent in their feelings that they do not want an extra session of Congress. I have spoken to hundreds of people around here in the surrounding towns and they are unanimous in their belief that the nation as a whole will be better off if we have relief from political discussions at this time in order to give the country a chance to get its bearings and adjust itself, to eliminate unnecessary excitement which may arise over the prospects of business in any way, shape or manner.

Trusting you will take this letter in the spirit in which it is written and that you will co-operate with this request, I am,

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) J. J. Hermann.

No Opposition Found to Wright-Patman Bill

Editor Boston American:

The American is to be commended for permitting the veterans to express their wishes regarding the Wright-Patman bill in Congress.

As yet I have neither seen nor heard of any of the veterans opposed to this measure. A still much a suggestion was shouted out of order by the national convention of the American Legion in October.

It begins to look like the Big Shots in the Legion are obligated to the administration. I and many, many more are still wondering why such legislation could be called out of order at a time like this.

Veterans Urged to Join Service Organizations

Editor Boston American:

To All World War Veterans: If you are eligible to join Disabled American Veterans, Veterans of Foreign War, or American Legion—join them.

The D. A. V. stand for cash bonuses, more hospital beds, widows and orphans allowances, attendants fees from $50 to $75 month, hospitalized insane $30 instead of $20.

That the men with service connected disabilities be allowed to reinstate their insurance as well as veterans in good physical condition, permanently disabled dependency allowance.

That the government bear all expenses when veterans are successful in insurance suits.

That payments on permanent and total disabilities be not deducted from the face value of the insurance policy.

Cheerful Beggar Is Found in Boston

Editor Boston American:

I found something unique on Boston streets the other day. It was in the busy section of Washington and Franklin sts. Hundreds of people were going to and fro. I have often heard of a cheerful giver, but never ran across a cheerful beggar.

I met him. He came up to me standing with another person, greeting us both with a good laugh. He was perfectly sober, but overflowing with good nature.

"Say gents, I'm dead broke, having got here some time ago from another city and found my old friend gone," he explained laughing.

There was not a serious or silly note about him. He seemed to make fun out of his hard luck. "Yes, I'm stranded," he added in a cheerful way. His outward appearance was anything but seedy, yet he kept spinning out jolly good nature, completing it with a request:

"Boys, can you let me have a quarter. It will keep me going till tomorrow."

He got it. Now he was the most cheerful beggar not soused. It, any means, left me overflowing with cheer, and it won both of us. A cheerful beggar is a new production in human nature.

Vets Look to War Wealth to Pay Up World War Bon-

Editor Boston American:

Thanks for the space in your column. Mr. Penbody and my many other buddies. I thank you all for your kind letters.

We buddies let's keep the ball rolling to victory. Never mind Mr. Hines' or Mr. Mullen's statements about the $3,000,000,000 to pay the bonus bill. Where are a. the millionaires we made during the World War? They made it on us, now let them pay us off. It is about time they woke up and paid a bill long past due the veterans.

No amount of money could have paid for our lives in war time. Our work was done and the war ended, and then it was "Our boys, we will do anything for them." Well, do it now while we are in the need of this money. Come on, buddies, keep on the firing line until this victory is won.

SCORES JOINING FISHER BODY COACH GUILD

The broad opportunity for self-betterment held out by the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild is bringing scores of new members into the Boston Evening American Chapter of the guild every week.

This is not strange when it is recalled that the plan under which the guild awards will be distributed makes it possible for 20 to 24 boys to come in on the final honors, right here in the area served by the Boston Evening American.

In addition to the four topnotch awards of four-year university scholarships to be given in the country at large, every boy enrolled has a chance to earn one of the 20 splendid state awards to be given in each state.

PLENTY OF TIME TO JOIN

Those who have not yet joined the guild have ample time to do so. Just fill out the enrollment blank at any General Motors car dealer's, and the bronze guild button, membership card, color prints, plans, specifications and rule book will be sent to you at once, free of charge.

This week's instructions will require some close attention to detail, though not actually difficult to carry out. Boys are urged to study them carefully in conjunction with the guild plans and specifications before going ahead.

LESSON NO. 8

Lower Front Gear

Continuing our lesson of last week in which the making of the front axle and splinter bar of the lower front gear assembly was explained, our lesson this week will take up the making of the other parts of the lower front gear assembly.

Side Arms

The side arms should present no difficulty, as they are merely pieces of wood 1-inch square and of the length shown in the guild drawings. Make the pieces at least an inch longer than required length so as to allow for cutting to the proper angle. The joint at the splinter bar may be a plain butt joint. In this case the side arms should be fastened to splinter bar by nailing with 6-inch brads. The joint will be strengthened when the side arm braces are fastened in place.

A mortise and tenon joint may be used for joining splinter bar and side arms. This type of joint will make a stronger construction. See illustration No. 10 for method of making mortise and tenon joints and butt joints.

Center Arms

In making the center arms make first a cardboard pattern of these pieces as shown on your guild drawing.

Work a piece of wood to the thickness of arms, ¾-inch. The width and length should be larger than the sizes given on guild drawings to allow for arranging the pattern on the piece with grain of wood to best advantage. See illustration No. 10. After the arms have been traced or marked on the stock they can easily be cut to shape with a coping saw, jig saw or band saw. Finish with sandpaper. The front ends of the center arms may be beveled with scrap of brass as shown on the guild drawing, or left plain as shown.

Hounds, Front and Rear

The front and rear hounds are the two semi-circular pieces of lower front assembly on which the fifth wheel of upper assembly rides. The guild drawing perspective sketch of this assembly shows the location of the hounds. Study the drawing until you have this location clearly in mind.

Notice, in the side view of the hounds, that they fit on the center arms at an angle. This is for the purpose of leveling the two top surfaces of hounds with the front axle. Refer to the angle at which center arms set in relation to floor level.

Our lesson next week will finish the lower gear construction.

How to Make the Gear

La Follette's Son Becomes Wisconsin's 'Baby' Governor

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5 (AP)—Philip Fox La Follette, 33 years old, second son of Wisconsin's "Old Fighting Bob" LaFollette, today became Wisconsin's youngest governor. He succeeded Walter J. Kohler, millionaire plumbing goods manufacturer.

La Follette, who at the age of three saw his father inaugurated and who lived for several years in the old stone executive mansion built by the famous violinist, Ole Bull, today took the oath to follow Wisconsin's constitution on the same spot his father affirmed it in 1901.

His two children, Judith, two years old, and Robert Marion 3rd, four, witnessed the ceremony. With them was their mother, graduate of Phil" of the University of Wisconsin, and student, like the Governor, of social economy and the science of government.

U. S. Senator Robert M. La Follette also was present.

Phil, sharp-faced, smiling, quick of movement and with his black hair resembling the wavy mane of his late father, took the oath as a virtual progressive reunion was celebrated. Twice in the last four year conservatives have occupied the Governor's chair.

$90,000 to Widows of 9 Congressmen

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—Dependents of nine members of Congress who have died recently are to receive $90,000 under the first deficiency appropriation reported today by the House appropriations committee.

Of these $10,000 each will go to the widows of Representatives William C. Hammer, North Carolina; Edgar R. Kiess, Pennsylvania; Florian Lampert, Wisconsin; David J. O'Connell, New York; John F. Quayle, New York; Otis Wingo, Arkansas; daughter of Charles M. Stedman, North Carolina; daughter of Stephen G. Porter, and $5000 each to the sister and daughter of Charles F. Curry of California.

DRIVE ON G. O. P. 'OLD GUARD' IS REPUDIATED

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

The drive instituted by the younger wing of the Republican Party to oust the "Old Guard" from control of the party machinery at the Republican State Committee election next Thursday was repudiated today by several prominent party workers throughout the state.

Frederick S. Deiadfield of Lenox, former member of the committee, denied reports he was opposed to the re-election of Chairman Amos L. Taylor of Belmont.

"If I were still a member of the committee, I should certainly vote for you for chairman and I have a telegram from Henry Parkman saying there is nothing personal in the attack against you," Delafield wrote to Taylor.

OTHER ASSURANCES.

Assurances of support also were received by Taylor from Judge Samuel Barnet, chairman of the New Bedford Republican city committee; Lewis R. Hovey of Haverhill, member of the executive committee of the Republican state committee; David Y. Ross of the Republican city committee of Somerville, and former United States Asst. Atty.-Gen. George R. Farnum.

Ross, in his communication, characterized the group opposing Taylor, as "spoiled youngsters" and recommended the administration of " a real good spanking along the old woodshed methods."

UP TO COMMITTEE

Chairman Taylor, when questioned as what action he would take on the request of Rep. Henry L. Shattuck of Boston for a postponement of the election, declared it was for the committee, and not for him to dicide.

The joining of Mrs. Charles Summer Bird in the anti-Taylor movement was laid by Taylor's friends today to her disappointment in the refusal of former Chairman Frank Foss and the present chairman to approve of her plan to have the Women's Republican Club take over and absorb the work of the women's division of the state committee.

Pulsifer, Publisher and Educator, Dies

New York, Jan. 5 (INS)—William E. Pulsifer, 78, educational publisher, who was one of New England ancestry, was dead at his home here today after an attack of pneumonia. The publisher was born in Sumner, Me., and was graduated from Kent's Hill Seminary in 1870. From 1878 to 1883 he was principal of the Stoughton Mass., high school and later school superintendent at Leominster, Mass.

THE LAST MILE -:- By Lewis Browne

CHAPTER 37

A GUARD came in with Bromley, the evangelist, and took him to cell seven.

"Here he is—he goes tonight," the guard said.

"Well, well, here you are, my good man. You've set yourself right with God—ready to meet Him tonight? That's right—that's the way, face to face, man-like."

"Cheerio Bromley, eh? What do you want?" Dick scowled at him for he brought memories of the time he went to hear him with Ethel Simmons.

"Want to see if your soul is saved."

"I want a stay, but I'm ready to go," Dick muttered.

The guard took him out.

"Light me a smoke, I'm so wet with alcohol in my hair I'm afraid I'll blow up." Dick said as Bromley was taken out.

O'Flaherty did so and passed it to him.

Father O'Connors came back again. Dick knew what that meant—he was there to stay with him until the end.

"Your mother would like some—er—word from you, Walters," Father O'Connors said.

"Here——"

Every man locked up there, with the exception of the demented Werner crowded out at this end offered money. Even Tom D'Amoro offered some and he had been back in a corner of his cell, sick and trembling at what was going on. It was a tough thing to be put in the death house but to be put in at night and a few hours before one of the boys goes to the chair was a terrible ordeal. None of the others blamed the young Italian who had swaggered in so jauntily, full of false bravado.

"Wire her, Father, wire my mother for me."

"Certainly, my son. It shall go right out, what will you say?"

"Tell her I'm thinking of her and I'm laughing and singing and not afraid—tell her I'm not afraid—give her my love—tell her my last word is. I didn't do it—what they're murdering me for."

Father O'Connors began to scribble the message, making it a little more coherent and omitting the last thing.

Then Keeper Callahan came in and went to Dick's door.

"I've got to read this to you, Walters."

"Sure—sure— My God—look—I got my stay at last, fellers—I got my stay! I knew I would!"

"No, Walters—it's the law, I got to read this—it's the death warrant——"

Head Keeper Callahan started to read the death warrant loudly.

"Mumble it, you fool!" Mears yelled.

Callahan hesitated, scowled and read on. Dick knew it all by heart. He tried to cover his ears. Callahan was something of a fiend, it semed. He stood close to the bars and read louder:

"IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that execution on the said sentence be done on the said Richard Walters, by you, the said Warden of the above-named penitentiary, in the manner provided by law on such day——"

Dick began to sing. He yelled the song, an incoherent jumble of "Tra-la-las" and "Dee-do-dees," just to drown out the sound of Callahan's voice.

Callahan finished and stood back. He was scowling and rather red in the face. Plainly, he was nervous.

"No need to rub it in," Dick said. "It's the law," Callahan growled.

"It's a helluva law that murders an innocent guy."

"They all say that," Drake remarked, with a sneer.

"If I ever get my hands around your neck," Mears cried.

"Me, too—me, too!" boomed Jackson.

"You guys will cook before long," Drake growled.

"Who wants these slippers," Dick called out.

"Me, Boss!"

Communion

"All right, Jackson. Screw, a light—no light me a smoke, 'tain't alcohol on me——"

Peddle handed him a lighted cigarette. Dick took a long drag at it and began to sing:

"A little white light will lead you to my blue heaven;
A smiling face, a fire-place, a cozy room——"

He broke off abruptly.

Mears knew how he felt. He couldn't restrain a groan. It made him sick.

"Hold on, buck up, Walters, buck up." Kirby suddenly begged. "The Governor's likely to give you a stay yet. I'll bet he is waitin' to give ya a scare."

"All right, but if I don't get it I'll try and break a record—they say no buy died here who didn't show weakness. I'll go like a man —I know I can."

"Right, buddy—shame to have you go," D'Amoro called out from down in One, "but don't weaken."

"I hate—to—go——"

Father O'Connors went over at this point and was let into the cell.

He began, solemnly——

"Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be — Thy Kingdom come——"

"Hol-mes!"

Werner hadn't spoken for a long while before this.

"He would, right in the middle of Holy Communion," D'Amoro said.

Father O'Connors went on, undisturbed.

The guards stared down at the floor. The doomed men clung to the bars of their doors and listened——

"——us from evil. Amen. Read the prayer, Walters.

Dick read it slowly and without a tremor. But when the priest went into the response:

"Lord, have mercy on us,
Christ, have mercy on us.
Lord, have mercy on us."

Dick started to break down. He caught himself.

"Oh Christ, get me out of here," he said, suddenly.

"Calm yourself, my son."

Sunny Jackson was praying up in cell thirteen. They could hear the rumble of his deep voice but could make out only a few words as "Lawd God help that man."

"Repeat—O God, who has saved me and forgiven me."

"But I'm not saved, I've got to go—"

"He has saved your soul, Walters."

Dick repeated the line.

"Keep my supplication."

"Hear my supplication."

"And take me unto Thy eternal keeping."

"And take me unto Thy eternal keeping."

"Amen. Domine, nostrum, dignus! Ut istres sub tectum meum set tautum die verbo, et sanabitus anima mea."

The priest repeated this three times, and then:

Corpus Domini nostri Jesus Christi Custiodiat animan tuam in vitam aeternam, Amen. Now Richard Walters, let us pray."

After a silence came the resonant, strong voice of the priest as he blessed him:

"Benedictio Dei Omnipotentis Patris et Filio Et Spiritus Sancti descendant super te, et maneat semper. Amen."

Father O'Connors made a sign and was let out of the cell. Slowly he walked down that short distance through the corridor that led to the green door. His eyes were on his book and he read his prayers in a low but clear voice.

There was utter silence in the death house for a few moments.

Beside the hideous green door Father O'Connors stood, and he might have been a statue but for the motion of his lips and the sound of his voice as he continued reading prayers.

Then Dick sighed.

"Well!" he said, almost explosively.

Another silence. Dick spoke again.

"I hate to go, but it looks as though it had to be done."

"Don't give up hope yet, Walters," Kirby said.

"I—I still have hopes but they're getting weak — getting weak, getting weak—"

"Keep on your feet, man," Mears begged.

"Right—sure—and I can."

"Hol-mes!"

"Poor devil." Dick muttered, "I'd almost rather be in my place than his—light me another cigarette, somebody."

It was O'Flaherty who did this for him and stepped up close as he handed it to him.

"He's a grand priest — you're doing great—don't be afraid," he said, in a low voice.

"O'Flaherty, you're regular—how come you ever get such a rotten job as this?" Dick asked.

"A man has to live."

"This lousy State I was born in don't seem to think so," Dick cried.

More silence.

3. Simple parts are absolutely fool-proof.

THE CABINET:

1. Exterior—white Duco finish on Parkerized steel. Interior —white porcelain fused on to Armco iron.
2. Kelvatex insulation, made in one piece, fits exactly.
3. Two freezing trays make 42 ice cubes.
4. Equipped with powerful refrigeration mechanism.

DOROTHY MACKAILL TO HAVE ROLE OF ENGLISH SPY IN HER NEXT FILM

STORY BASED ON TITLED WOMAN'S EXPERIENCES

By LOUELLA PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5—As the literary forces at First National have been concentrating on Dorothy Mackaill to get her a starring vehicle with plenty of good red corpuscles. The intelligentsia have they have succeeded in corralling "I Spy" for Dorothy, and that it is a great story and just right for Dot.

Let me tell you about "I Spy." It is written by Baroness Carlo Jannesen and it is the actual experiences of the baroness with a love story added for good measure. She was with the British intelligence office and "I Spy" is her personal experience in South Africa, Spain and Italy. The heroic love story helps the dramatic interest and who Louella O. Parsons among us are refusing to be interested in the love of a young woman with Dorothy's appeal.

WE HAVE had everybody rumored for the lead in "Front Page" from Ben Turpin to Ronald Colman. I think everybody will be glad to know that Howard Hughes and Lewis Milestone have at last made up their minds on the actor who is to play the role of Hildy Johnson. His name is Pat O'Brien and he is a New York actor.

I was surprised to hear this for I knew that Lewis Milestone had had another person in mind. I went to say a word here about Milestone. We were on the same house party over New Year's and I never had a chance before to really know him. What an intellect, what a brain, and what a background and what modesty! If Lewis Milestone doesn't make another "All Quiet on the Western Front" then I am all wrong about my estimate of him.

SNAPSHOTS OF Hollywood collected at random: COLLEEN MOORE looking like a small girl of six in a checked gingham dress worn at the baby party given as a surprise to MARION DAVIES on her birthday. ELEANOR BOARDMAN with a white bow in her hair, looking incredibly young. KING VIDOR wearing bangs and representing a small German boy. BEBE DANIELS in pink with hair bow. THE MARQUISE DE LA FALAISE in Lord Fauntleroy costume with white lace collar and cuffs. LEWIS MILESTONE winning the prize for the funniest costume, checked rompers. MONA MARIS looking very attractive in riding clothes. LENORE HUSHMAN adding becoming freckles to her getup. JACK MULHALL at the party in a funny little round hat. MRS. MULHALL looking lovely in old-fashioned costume. CLARENCE BROWN, CHARLES LEDERER, SALLIE O'NEIL, HARRY CROCKER and others getting praised for original costumes. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

GANG FILM AT TWIN HOUSES

"The Widow from Chicago," gangland film, is now at the Modern and Beacon. Neil Hamilton is the hero. Alice White is the heroine. Edward G. Robinson's characterization of "Dominic," the master mind of Chicago's underworld, is a clever piece of acting. Co-featured is "She Got What She Wanted," with Betty Compson, Lee Tracy, Alan Hale and Gaston Glass. This picture tells a story of a young couple in a New York flat. At the time of their marriage they agreed that should either of them fall in love with another, freedom was to be unquestionably his or hers to pursue. Complications arise. The couple find out that they really love each other.

Park Theater

Georgs Sidney and Charlie Murray, in "The Cohens and Kellys in Africa," have been entertaining audiences at the Park so well that a second week of this film is now in progress. Sidney and Murray were never funnier or better advantaged. Another important feature on the triple holiday bill is "The Spell of the Circus."

A Barrage of Questions

WALTER HUSTON AND MARY DORAN
"THE CRIMINAL CODE" at RKO Keith's presents Walter Huston in one of his greatest roles. In this scene from the film he is shown with Mary Doran.

'MAN TO MAN' ON 2 SCREENS

"Man to Man," the picturization of Hen Ames Williams' powerful story of the devotion of father and son, is at the Fenway and Scollay. The action takes place in a small town in Kentucky, where a barber tries to live down the stigma of a prison term, and to save his boy from the same fate. A note of pathos is struck in the story when the boy realizes that his father's past has placed a black mark upon him both in the social and business world, except for a few old-timers who know the crime to have been justified.

Grant Mitchell has the role of "Barber John." The juvenile leads, played by Phillips Holmes and Lucille Powers, are well done.

Lucille Powers

"The Bat Whispers" on Bowdoin Program

A new picture and vaudeville program are features at the Bowdoin Square. The chief film is "The Bat Whispers," starring Chester Morris. The associate picture is "A Devil With Women," with Victor McLaglen. The vaudeville is headed by the Lido Venice Girls, with new songs and dances. Other acts include Morrell Trio, Tom and Louise Trio, Gans and Perkins, Harriet Cole, Johnny Harrigan and Marcel and Dade. Beginning Thursday the features will be "Life of the Party" and "Brothers."

LOUIS WOLHEIM SCORES IN 'DANGER LIGHTS'

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A FEW MOVIE ACTORS can always be counted on to put a Walter Huston touch in any picture. Such a one is Louis Wolheim, every ready to vitalize a role, always dependable. He is the outstanding actor in "Danger Lights," a rare treat of a railroad film holding the feature place on the Keith-Boston screen. The bill is splendidly balanced with vaudeville of the usual RKO quality.

"DANGER LIGHTS" proves to be one of the finest pictures of its kind. It is ably directed, and the camera work is well-nigh flawless. The movie whips along with befitting speed, and the train sequences are so well done that one's interest is keyed up to a high pitch. Radio Pictures can be proud of the production; and railroad men will probably find it is to be an epic treatment of their vocation. The spirit of the life in the locomotive is deftly transferred to the silver sheet; the click-click of the wheels, the onward rush of the moguls of the rails, make the screen pulse with vigor of a red-blooded drama. This is a superb example of how the camera may be made to speak language more eloquent than the human voice.

MR. WOLHEIM gives a sterling characterization of a division boss. Robert Armstrong is satisfactory as the hero engineer. Miss Arthur is just fair. As a matter of fact, the romantic angle is the least interesting, and the least important factor in the film.

* * *

ON STAGE, Pa Crockett and his five sons, from the Kentucky mountain country, hold the headline place. They fill the niche that was to have been occupied by Franck Richardson, vaudeville favorite who made good in several pictures. Stricken with ptomaine poisoning, he was unable to come to Boston; so at the last moment RKO corraled the Kentuckians and sent them over. They make good, too. Other excellent acts are Harry Anger and Mary Fair; Van Hora and Inez; Joe Burns and Murray Kissen, and the "Revue Unique," featuring Roy Zastro and Denny White.

OLD STARS ON HOWARD BILL

The Old Howard Theater offers a rare treat this week. The vaudeville specialty will introduce the variety stars of other days. They are all old-timers who were the favorites of their time.

Among them are Josephine Sabel, 67, who made famous the song, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

Then comes Annie Hart, 68, who played in Sullivan's "Chowder." Lizzie Wilson, a German comedienne of other days, is 72 years old. Tom Harris, who boasts the age of 86, danced before President Lincoln. Danny Simmons, 66, is the creator of Jiggs in the cartoon comedy, "Bringing Up Father." Dave Genaro is 61 and a character comedian who created the cake walk.

Theater Guild Matinee to Aid the Actors' Fund

An extra popular-priced matinee of Bernard Shaw's "The Apple Cart" is announced by the Theater Guild for next Tuesday afternoon, at the Tremont. For this matinee the subscription is suspended, giving non-subscribers the opportunity of securing choice seats. The reason for this special performance is to help the great theatrical charity, The Actors' Fund of America, take care of the aged and destitute of the dramatic profession. The entire receipts will be devoted to this worthy cause, and in order to insure a capacity house the prices will be from 50 cents to $2.

"Ladies All" to Go on Extended Road Tour

Following the local engagement of "Ladies All" at the Majestic, which will end next week, this smart comedy, starring Walter Woolf and Violet Heming, will take to the road on what is announced as the most extensive tour of the season. From here the company goes to Philadelphia for four weeks, thence to Chicago for a run.

JOSE ITURBI IN SYMPHONY CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

Jose Iturbi, virtuous pianist from Spain, whose playing of Liszt's E-Flat Concerto with the Symphony Orchestra was one of the great sensations of last season, gave a recital yesterday in Symphony Hall.

Iturbi opened with Schubert's Sonata in A major, which was followed by the Symphonic Studies of Schumann. Two pieces by Infante, one by Granados, a funeral march by Lazar and a piano arrangement of three numbers from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" rounded out the list.

Iturbi played with astonishing brilliance, clarity, speed and, when needed, power. In other words, he has the virtues of the modern pianist. The modern pieces were played with delicacy or with dash, as the occasion demanded. In the Stravinsky Suite there was display of an extraordinary technical mastery—difficult octave glissandi were tossed off with almost prodigal ease. The Schumann Studies, unfortunately, were similarly treated—as a sort of technical exercise—which is certainly not the way for this music.

At no time was the pianist a "showman," which may account for the coolness of the audience.

Tuesday Symphony

An All-Wagner program will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, in the second concert of the Tuesday afternoon series to be given in Symphony Hall next Tuesday, at 3 o'clock. The numbers will include: Overture to "Rienzi"; Bacchanale from "Tannhauser."

Paavo Nurmi Makes Ready for Another American Invasion ↑ ↓ Yankee Milers Are Ready for Finnish Flyer This Time

Ryder Thinks Lermond Will Wreck Record

In a Christmas card from far off Helsingfors, Finland, to Chris Dalton, the veteran timer, Paavo Nurmi, the remarkable Finnish middle-distance runner, sent combined Christmas and New Year's greetings to the athletic clans of America. In an accompanying letter to Dalton, the Finnish Flyer says that unless present plans miscarry, he will come to America soon to work in the Ford plant in Detroit, and that he hopes to be able to compete in many of the big American track and field games. That's good news. Uncle Sam always has a "Welcome" on the mat for an athlete of Nurmi's remarkable ability. And this time, Paavo, Old Boy, our Yankee flyers are going to give you a bit of competition, especially at the mile.

All the signs along the trail are that before 1931 folds its tent and steals into the past some one of the present crop of milers is going to step eight furlongs in better than 4.12. We have the milers now and the needed competition. This is the pre-Olympic year. There always is a reawakening of athletic interest the year before the Olympic Games. Reawakened interest means more and better competition. More and better competition means record wrecking.

George Underwood

The first big guns in the athletic campaign of 1931 will be fired next month at the meets of the Millrose A. A. in New York and the Boston A. A. here at the Arena. Ralph Hill, the former University of Oregon flyer, who last May set a new mile outdoor record of 4.12 2-5, his conqueror, Joe Sivak of Butler, and Ray Conger, Dr. Paul Martin and Leo Lermond, all tried and true campaigners, will answer the call to post.

A mile race bringing together such a fleet field should make athletic history. It is possible that the winner will snap the tape in faster time than the present indoor record of 4.12 jointly held by Nurmi and Joie Ray. Generally Father Time escapes when an especially fast field faces the barrier, for the runners are so busy watching each other and jockeying for pace and position that time has to suffer. But sometimes some star to win may try to make it a red hot race right from the gun and either will break the record himself or pull a rival along fast enough to break it.

WHAT EXPERTS THINK

Most of the experts believe that if Paavo Nurmi is to be beaten by any American miler the man who will do it is most likely to come from among Dr. Martin, Conger and Lermond. Ralph Hill, the new outdoor record holder, is not so well thought of as a campaigner.

To be sure, Hill, the week after he stepped a mile in 4:12 2-5, beat Paul Kiser in 4.15 in a dual meet between Oregon and Washington State. But shortly after that both Hill and Kiser were beaten by Joe Sivak of Butler in 4.19.5-10 and later finished third and fourth to W. C. Getz of Alfred and O. J. Martin of Purdue in a race in which Getz turned in 4.19 4-10.

Conger, Martin and Lermond all are considered better campaigners than Hill and are thought to have a better chance of showing their heels to Nurmi. Hill, however, hasn't been given a chance yet to show just what he can do in Eastern indoor competition and perhaps it would be better to postpone judgment of him. He may flash forth with a performance that will confute the critics. Some experts think Joe McCluskey of Fordham, who now is running longer distances, may develop into a good miler. None of our Americans yet class with Lava of Finland and Ladomeque of France.

Jack Ryder, than whom there are no better judges of runners or conditioners of athletes, believes Leo Lermond has it in him to step a mile in 4.10. Ryder believes Lermond is likely to uncork a 4.10 performance before the year is over. He says Leo hasn't really yet struck his best running gait and never yet has been conditioned properly.

Ryder now is working Leo over the long distances to develop stamina and endurance for the mile. Later Jack will have Leo working at the half-mile and the 1000-yard distances to speed. In mid-season he will enter him in the mile and send him after the record.

There was one American athlete who, if he had continued in athletics and been trained and campaigned rightly, certainly would have beaten 4.10 for the mile.

That was John Paul Jones of Cornell.

THE GREAT JONES

Jones was raced too infrequently to make the most of his running. He had no racing head or judgment of pace. With campaigning judgment of pace would have come and he also would have improved in speed and stamina. Even without campaigning, Jones should have beaten 4.12 that June day in 1913 when he stepped the mile in 4.11 2-5 at the intercollegiate championships in the Harvard Stadium.

The only thing that kept Jones from beating 4.12 that day was the way he loafed throughout three-quarters of the distance. The long, lean, lanky Ithacan made all of his running in the last quarter. He was yards back of the leader at the half which was turned in the lamentably slow time of 2.09 2-5. The time at three-quarters was 3.16 1-5.

Not in the history of sport has any other miler not stepping three-quarters of a mile in better than 3.18 completed the mile in faster time than 4.58. Yet that day at Harvard Stadium, Jones lengthened out in the last quarter raced up, through, and away from the field to come home in the remarkable time of 4:11 2-5.

If Jones had stepped the first half better than 2.03 and the three quarters around 3.09, as he should have done, he surely would have cracked 4.12 and might even have gone under 4.10.

SOME OLD NOTES

Looking over some old notes we recently came upon the times by quarters made in several classic mile races. Glance over these figures and see how Jones erred by loafing so in that race of 1913. You will see that the Cornellian erred almost as much in the intercollegiate of 1911. If John Paul Jones ever had run a race "from the gun" the athletic world would not be talking so much about Joie Ray or Paavo Nurmi, for Jones would have turned a mile faster than 4.10.

When W. G. George did his 4.12 3-4 it was in a professional one mile match race with Billie Cummings at Lillie Bridge, London. Th pair raced neck and neck from gunfire to tape tear. Tommy Conneff and Norman Taber made their times in special limited handicap races with men out ahead to "pull" them along. Here are the times by quarters, made in six of the great one mile races:

Turnesa Captures Miami Golf Title

Miami, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP)—Joe Turnesa has succeeded to his Miami open golf title, relinquished voluntarily by Gene Sarazen, who held it four successive years.

With an almost mechanical tally of 73—73—74—74—294, Turnesa blew off the lid of Florida's golfing treasure hunt.

Johnny Farrell, Henri Ciuci and Eddie Williams tied at 295 to rank next to the winner.

WHEN NURMI STEPS ASHORE

WHEN PAAVO NURMI, the Finnish Flyer, steps ashore this time he will find the American milers a bit better prepared for him than they were on his last visit. RALPH HILL, former Oregon collegian, already has stepped a mile outdoors faster than Nurmi. Coach Jack Ryder says LEO LERMOND has it in for him to turn a mile under 4.10. The fellow who should have put it over the one mile record below 4.10, but didn't, was JOHN PAUL JONES, the lanky Cornell collegian.

National League Clubs Will Take Few Rookies South

By JOE CASHMAN.

Business depression seems to have hit the National League.

Though every big league club can take as many players South as it desires and many of the American League outfits will try out 50 or more candidates next spring, no team in the senior circuit will carry as many as 40 athletes into training, according to present information.

The largest roster in the league is that of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and it contains but 38 names.

Joe Cashman

Next in line comes the Braves and Giants, each with 37 names on their list. The Cubs are one behind with 36.

The lowly Phils have only 31 listed and the Reds and Pirates have but 30.

The champion St. Louis Cards will travel lightest of all with only 29 players.

Clubs May Save Money but Pass Up Stars

It cost $300 at least to take a player South, so the National League clubs will save a considerable sum of money by reducing the roster to the bone.

Each team will lose far more than it will save, however, if it loses the services of even one future big leaguer as a result of the economy wave.

For any regular performer under the big tent is worth $10,000 of any magnate's money these days, and it requires plenty of three hundreds to make ten thousand.

The champion St. Louis Cards, with their numerous farms, where they can pick up players when needed, needn't worry about having only 29 players to pick from, but it would seem wise for lowly clubs like the Reds and Phils to have far more than 30 players with which to experiment next spring.

The Braves, Cubs, Dodgers and Giants while not overburdened with material, by any means, appear to have enough to supply their wants.

The Braves' roster as announced by the National League publicity bureau numbers 42, but five players have gone from the Tribe since the list was prepared.

Bobby Smith was traded to the Cubs, Jimmy Welsh was sent to Los Angeles, Bernie James and Ralph Boyle, two rookies, were sold to Baltimore and the Tribe decided not to hold on to Arthur Veltman, a youngster secured last fall.

Tom Dunn to Act as Braves' Umpire

Tom Dunn, last year an umpire in the Eastern League and booked to arb trate in the Pacific Coast League next season, will go South with the Braves to serve as the training camp ump for the Tribe.

Dunn is a city councilor from Fitchburg and has had a good deal of experience in "calling 'em."

Bill McKechnie will be in town tomorrow afternoon. The local baseball scribes will gather in session with Bill and some news of his plans is likely to be forthcoming.

'Babe Ruth' of 80's Dies at Waterbury

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 3 (AP)—Roger Connor, first baseman on the New York Giants baseball club for 13 years and a fence buster long before the day of the "rabbit ball," is dead.

Starting his career on the sandlots as a lad of eight, Connor entered the professional game with the Holyoke, Mass., team of the old New England League, switched to the New Bedford club in the same circuit, and was sold to Troy, then in the National League, whose franchise was acquired by the New York Giants in 1876.

The Giants purchased him in 1878 and he became the ranking first baseman of his time. He also played with Philadelphia and ended his major league days with St. Louis in the same league. During all that time he never clouted under .300 and led the league in 1883 with .362, a phenomenal mark for that period.

Ty Cobb Denies He Will Become Diamond Magnate

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 5 (AP)—Ty Cobb believes that being mogul of his home town's sports is enough job for one man. He is not interested in buying any baseball clubs.

The "Georgia Peach" took public notice today of rumors that he was contemplating entering the owning end of the diamond business, and said that he planned to devote all his time to the position of director of Augusta sports offered him a week ago.

Cobb denied the report some time ago that he had been offered the Philadelphia Nationals, adding that he is not interested in that or any other club excepting as a spectator at games.

"However," he said, "a few months ago another club was offered me, but the price of baseball clubs does not seem to be on the level with the market for other commodities. Besides, I have no desire to resume active harness. Now that the home town has honored me with the chairmanship of its sports committee I will devote myself to that. It is a bigger job than handling any ball club and much more important to me because it is for the betterment of my city."

HARVARD TRIO IN POLO DEBUT

The Harvard varsity pony polo team will play its first indoor game next Saturday evening against the strong Westwood Polo Club in a division A contest of the Boston Polo League at the Commonwealth Armory.

The Harvard freshmen will also make their official bow in a Class B league match with the Cavalry Cossacks.

The Crimson varsity mallet team will be composed of Ernest Jenkins, Eldridge Gerry and Bill Nicholas and as all have been members of the polo squad for the past two years they are expected to give the Westwood trio a hard battle.

Horsemen's Banquet

The 18th annual New England Horsemen's day banquet will be held on February 17 at Hotel Bond, Hartford.

Fall River Wins First Half in American Soccer League

Fall River won the first half of the American Soccer League, the Marksmen finishing with an 11-point margin over New Bedford, the runners-up.

The Whalers lost their chance to oust the Marksmen Saturday when they fell before Brooklyn in a home game by a 2-to-1 score.

With the first half of the league over the clubs will now devote themselves to the round robin series in the national cup competition for a period of six weeks, after which they will start the second half augmented by the new Boston Celtic entry.

With the Celtics added the second half should be a much better race than the first half and all the clubs will have to play two games each week instead of laying off once every three weeks.

The Celtic management is dickering with Fall River and Providence in an effort to play an opening game at Brookline next Saturday.

Pawtucket Player Tied for Cue Lead

New York, Jan. 5—Arthur Woods of Pawtucket, R. I., went into a tie with Marcel Camp of Detroit for the lead in the interstate pocket billiards tournament by defeating Bennie Allen of Kansas City, 125 to 32, in 20 innings.

Woods had a high run of 41. Allen's best cluster was 10.

Marcel Camp of Detroit defeated Charles Seaback of Boston, 125 to 84, in 28 innings, for his fourth straight victory. Camp's high run was 25; Seaback's 27.

Sonnenberg Agrees to Meet Londos

2 RACES ARE LISTED FOR WOMEN

By BILL CONNELL

Six New England A. A. A. U championship events feature the first major track meet of the year in Boston, the annual Boston Y. M. C. A. games, at the Huntington ave. gymnasium on Saturday evening.

A more varied program than ever before at a Boston Y meet is offered and the meet lines up as the finest put on by the Young Men's Christian Association.

Bill Connell

New events on the program are the two races for women and the one-mile walk, all of which are little affairs. Ed Wilson and Harold Bell of the B. A. A., Pep Clark and other heel and toe artists are entered in the walk.

The women's races are the New England senior and junior title 40-yard dashes, and the 30-yard dash. The latter is a handicap event in which no crown is at stake.

New England title clashes for the men are the walk, the junior 600-yard run, junior running high jump and the junior 16-pound shot put.

Non-title events include the 45-yard hurdles, a scratch race. Several handicap runs are listed, the 45-yard dash, 300 and 1000-yard runs. Relay races top the splendid card.

As there will be only three other indoor track meets held in Boston this season, the Saturday night games should attract a large number of track followers.

Eddie Blake to Run in Local K. C. Meet

Eddie Blake of the B. A. A. holds the center of the track spotlight today as a result of his flashing finish which won him the Columbus 500 yards run Saturday night in New York.

Blake beat out a fast field, including Bernie McCafferty of Holy Cross, to grab the top honors in good time, considering that the race was run on a track without banks.

The first Boston appearance of Blake will be in the William C. Prout Memorial 440 yards run at the K. K. C. games in the Boston Garden on Jan. 31. Blake already has been invited to enter this feature race and will face an all-star field.

Lermond Needs a Few More Weeks of Training

Leo Lermond's friends were disappointed at Leo's defeat Saturday in the two-mile by Joe McCluskey of Fordham, when it was not a great two-miler. Lermond has been training only three weeks, however.

His next appearance probably will be in the Brooklyn College games, which will be held on Jan. 24 in New York.

Lermond will run no one-mile races until he has run a good two miles. Leo's friends were in fast mile row, but will stick to the longer run for a couple of meets, at least, for seasoning.

Sam Martin, B. A. A. runner who competed in New York Saturday night, finished fifth in the half mile. Sam, even as Lermond, is short of work. Studies at Harvard Law School demand so much of Martin's time that he has been unable to train steadily.

N. E. Amateurs Battle in Golden Glove Tournament

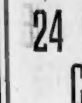
24 BOUTS ON BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS CARD AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY

Sweep off the boxing deck for action!

Here come the sturdy mitt wielders who have battled their way through the trials of the Golden Glove tournament. They will collide in the finals at the New Boston Arena tonight in a show which should furnish color, action and laughs.

Father Bill Cuddy of the St. Joe's T. A. Society has 32 boys who are ready to shoot with both dukes.



Jack Conway

They are the best of the New England simon pures. The youngsters have had their baptism of fire and have been found to possess the goods. Now they will make their bid for fame and glory in the Golden Glove finals.

Heavyweights, middleweights and dapper little flyweights. They will all be on the job. They'll furnish intensified boxing. Perhaps this is why amateur boxing has become so popular in Boston. The youngsters give everything they possess in the fistic line. There isn't any stalling, tin canning or angling for a return match. Each youngster breezes into action bent on destruction. He is eager to win as quickly and decisively as possible.

Take a peek around the ringside tonight. You will see men there whom you never see at the pro shows.

Bankers, doctors, lawyers, big business men all go for the amateurs like the bootblack and youngster on the street corner who have been saving their dimes so they can see their neighborhood hero in action.

Each mother's son of them will linger in the Arena until the final bit of leather has gone whirling through the air, until the winner has been decided in the closing bout of the evening. These amateur ring quarrels sure do grip people and make them forget all else. Father Bill at the St. Joe's says amateur boxing is a great tonic for the nerves. And I guess Father Bill is right.

Amateur Heavyweights to Battle for Honors

They will roll out four sturdy amateur heavyweights at the Arena. Glance at the entry list. There is Henry Suretta of Leominster, Harry Owens of Cambridge, James McLean of South Boston and Ted Johnson of Quincy. All big, sturdy fellows who can punch.

Then there are the light heavyweights who also swing mean wallops. Paul McNamara of Allston, Dick Madden of Dorchester, Euclid Fleurette of Franklin and John Stempkoveid of Hyde Park will toss around kayo blows.

There is considerable interest in the appearance of Al Zappala of Lawrence in the 160-pound division. Zappala is touted highly by those persons who have been following the amateurs this season. He is a good boxer and can hit.

Zappala will not have things all his own way as Kickey Bishop of Stoughton, Clayton Cettino of Dorchester and Wallace Mignault of West Bridgewater will also compete in this division.

Welterweights May Put Forth Another Mello

The fans are hoping that the 147-pound group will produce a new Al Mello. Remember how the Lowell boy whanged his way through the ranks of the amateurs in 1924?

In the 147-pound division, Andre Chapdelaine of Franklin, Joe Delmont of Roxbury, Fred Moody, Penacook, N. H. and Anthony Metrano of Foxboro will try to prove how good they are.

Andy Callahan, New England lightweight champion, came up out of the amateurs. All of which should give courage to the boys who will compete in the 135-pound division. The battle for honors will be between George Pinto of East Boston, Renata Stanghellini of Plymouth, Joe Delano of Boston and John Mack of Taunton.

Featherweights will also have their innings. The list includes the names of Jed Pacino of Roxbury, James Forbes of Quincy, Joe Ancelli of Taunton and Joe Riccolotti of Boston.

There are some promising looking youngsters entered in the 112 and 118-pound classes.

Sit back, Mister Boxing Fan, and enjoy a real fighting card.

Come boys, let those punches fly!

Irish-American A. C. to Hold Tournament

Three heavyweights have already entered the first Diamond Belt elimination shows to be staged under the direction of the Irish-American A. C. in the Boston Arena, starting next Saturday night.

Classes in the tournament include 126 135, 147, 160 and light heavyweights and heavyweights, all open to any fighter.

Teams from Providence and Springfield have been entered and some entries have been received from Portland, Me.

LEATHER GLOVES FOR GOLDEN

AL ZAPPALA, of Lawrence, 160 pounds, is ready to make a strong bid for honors in his class in Golden Glove tourney.

FRANKIE MULHOLLAND, Taunton boy, who boxes in the 118-pound class in the Golden Glove tournament at the Boston Arena tonight.

CARNERA READY TO RETURN TO U. S.

Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight, is preparing to sail from Europe to the United States, according to information received today by the Boston Evening American from Norman Hurst of the Allied Newspapers with headquarters in London.

Hurst stated that Carnera was ready to sail and added that Primo asserted he was going to box Jack Sharkey at Miami, Fla., next month. Hurst was anxious to know if a Sharkey-Carnera match had been closed.

When questioned, Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey, didn't know that a Sharkey-Carnera bout had been arranged for Florida. Buckley added that in the event that Sharkey should box Carnera the contest would take place in New York next summer.

Frank Bruen, former general manager of the New York Garden who is anxious to promote boxing in Miami, is planning a Carnera-Stribling bout for February.

Jack Dempsey is understood to be angling for a bout between Max Schmeling and the winner of the proposed Carnera-Stribling bout. The New York Garden has a contract with Schmeling, but in the event the German's title is vacated in New York for refusal o box Jack Sharkey the Garden is said to be ready to step aside for Dempsey.

Runyon Urges All States to Adopt 'No Foul' Rule

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, Jan. 5—At a moment when the New York Boxing Commission is being lambasted until you can hear the lusty thwacks a mile away because of its stand in regard to Herr Max Schmeling and Sharkey, I fain would tack one small laurel on the thoughtful brows of the commissionaires.

I mean to say I have a little boost for them.

The rule that they put in force some months ago abolishing low-blow fouls has had a thorough trial, and it seems to be an unqualified success.

Damon Runyon

Such a success, I may say, that in my opinion it should be introduced in every state that has legalized boxing, as I note that the good old sock smack still flourishes in other parts. A little investigation by any commission of the results of the rule in New York state will prove that it is just the thing.

The first argument that was advanced against the no-foul rule when it was put in force by the commission was that it would put a premium on low blows, and produce numerous casualties among the gladiators. As a matter of fact, the commission instructed it's referees and judges to score a round in which a low blow was struck against the striker, and that was a saving clause.

There have been many bouts contested in New York state since the rule went into effect, and so far no casualties are reported from low blows. Furthermore, there have been no bouts suddenly terminated by low blows, accidental, or otherwise.

Ninety per cent of the low blows prior to the rule were intentional, anyway, a well thumped and faint hearted gladiator often taking that as method of escaping punishment and defeat.

Foul Blows Don't Seem to Hurt Any More

I have made a rather careful survey of the matter since the rule was adopted, and I notice that low blows are now very rare, and then they are invariably clearly accidental. A lot of notorious low punchers have suddenly been cured.

Also a lot of notorious whiners under belts to the old darby Kelly have suddenly discovered that these punches do not hurt half as much as they used to let on. Of course the protector that goes with the no-foul rule is responsible for this.

Oddly enough, though the no-foul rule as applied in low blows has been in force in New York almost a year, the local ringworms do not seem aware of the fact. When a low blow is struck you hear the boys yelling:

"Hey, keep 'em up, will you!"

The low blow cannot hurt the recipient if he is properly armored, except possibly the loss of the round.

Even the referees still motion the gladiators to keep their punches up, whereas if there cannot be a low-blow foul, then the referees have no more right to warn a low puncher than they have to admonish a gladiator for hitting the other guy on the chin.

In other words, in this state under the rule, a low blow is non-existent. The referees ought to get onto that.

Most Foul Claims in Past Were Evidently False

The fact that since the rule went in there hasn't been any fighters sprawling on the canvasses hereabouts, clutching at their belt lines and uttering low, piteous cries, proves conclusively that most of the foul claims were strictly the old phonus bolonus.

The rule has closed one wide open door to faking, and inasmuch the ringworms as much of a run for their dough as our fighters can give nowadays.

N. B. A. TO OUST SCHMELING

Chicago, Jan. 5 (AP)—Early returns from the National Boxing Association's mail vote on a proposal to oust Max Schmeling as heavyweight champion, indicate the German will be without a title as far as the N. B. A. is concerned.

Ten states have sent in their votes to Maj.-Gen. John V. Clinnin, president of the N. B. A., and eight have voted to vacate the throne. One other state recommended that Schmeling be given 30 days to sign for a championship battle before vacating. The remaining state recommended 90 days before acting.

Thomas E. Donohue, chairman of the championship committee, has made his recommendations from rankings in each class, and has placed W. L. (Young) Stribling of Macon, Ga., as the number one heavyweight contender. The other rankings in order are: Jack Sharkey, Jimmy Maloney, Primo Carnera, Tuffy Griffiths, George Godfrey, Johnny Risko, Paulino Uscudun, Ernie Schaaf and Max Baer.

According to the ranking, the middleweight title is vacant, but Mickey Walker, generally recognized as champion, is made the first contender in the light heavyweight division, of which Maxie Rosenbloom is titleholder.

Other champions recognized are: Flyweight, Frankie Genaro; bantamweight, Al Brown; featherweight, Bat Battalino; junior lightweight, Benny Bass; lightweight, Tony Canzoneri; junior welterweight, Jackie (Kid) Berg; welterweight, Tommy Freeman.

New York, Jan. 5 (INS)—Frank Carideo, quarterback of the national champion football team, Notre Dame, was to be honored by fellow townsmen tonight at a public reception in Mount Vernon.

BLACKHAWKS THREATEN BRUINS

By BILL GRIMES

With the half-way mark of the National Hockey League championship only a week away, the contenders in the American wheel are relatively in the same positions they were a year ago, and as was the case last season the Canadian division clubs are all in the fight for play-off berths.

Although the Bruins are the pacemakers of the American loop they are and have been hard pressed all season by the Chicago Blackhawks. At this stage of the race a year ago, the Bruins were six games out in front of the second - place New York Rangers. The Blackhawks are right on the heels of the American champions and are a serious threat.

Bill Grimes

In 19 games, the Bruins have been victorious an even dozen times, but they have been twice tied for a total of 26 points. Last year the Rangers won 17 of their first 19 contests and were practically assured of a playoff position at the halfway mark.

Canadiens and Maroons Fighting for Lead

As was the case a year ago, the Montreal Maroons and Les Canadiens are fighting tooth and nail for the lead in the Canadian division. The Maroons broke a first place tie with Canadiens by defeating the Bruins in Montreal Saturday night, for the Flying Frenchmen were on the losing end of a conflict with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Last year the Frenchmen were a half game up on the Maroons at this time but as they had played one more game than their rivals, the clubs were about on equal footing.

For the first half of last season the Ottawa Senators flashed and were right up in the race, only a game and a half back of the Maroons but this year they have been experiencing trouble, especially since Newsy Lalonde was let out, with the result they are in last place with little likelihood of promotion.

The New York Americans have been showing most of the surprises by their success this year. Under Eddie Girard, the Star Spangled aggregation has developed an offense and have a favorable chance of ousting the Maple Leafs from third place, but little hope of leading either Maroons or Canadiens.

The Bruins are facing a tough week. They start off with a tilt with the wild Chicago Blackhawks tomorrow night at the Garden and then take to the road again, playing the Senators in Ottawa on Thursday and Detroit on Saturday.

With the exceptions of Philadelphia and Ottawa, every team in the N. H. L. is stronger this season than last. The Bruins are a far more formidable outfit, for the third line is in the running and superior to the trio that carried on for them last season. But in spite of the new power of the Bruins they are in for a hard fight for the rest of the season.

Montreal May Get Ex-Green Captain

Bob Walsh, a former Dartmouth captain, is seeking a place with the Montreal club of the International League.

After being graduated from college, Walsh joined the Detroit club but was soon tendered his unconditional release and went with the Raleigh club of the Piedmont league.

After his baseball at Woburn high school, Walsh finished his prep school career at Lake Forest Academy in Chicago and for two years played under Coach Jeff Tesreau at Dartmouth.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The forward swing can never be effective if you get away from the sound principle of keeping your clubhead low and close to the ground the first foot or two that it goes back. Every good golfer always has the club well out to the right and low down—not more than waist high — as he starts back. The opposite of this is picking the club up either directly from the ball or quickly after you start back with the result that the habit makes a smooth, sweeping forward swing almost impossible because your forward action is more likely to be a chop at the ball. Now another action to watch out for at the particular point in the back swing is this: Don't go back a little ways with the club low, then reach directly up with it, unless you want to slice every ball you hit. Go back low all right, and then let your club continue in its natural plane. If you will keep your left arm going and dismiss other details you will be apt to fall directly into the right action.

New York, Jan. 5 (US)—Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt is out to snatch Elsa Maxwell's thunder.

Those social Olympians whose names are enrolled on the carefully pruned lists Mrs. Vanderbilt uses when issuing invitations have been bidden to a costume party at the house "Bridie" leases from Ogden Livingston Mills at 4 E. 69th st.

Patterning her "bid" along the lines of La Maxwell's, Mrs. Vanderbilt's guests have been requested to "let their conscience be their guide in their choice of costume."

It all sounds very interesting and I could—but won't—suggest costumes that several of "Birdie's" guests should don, provided they look deep into their consciences.

Last autumn, Mrs. Vanderbilt gave a highly successfully "White Ball" out at her Long Island country home.

It remains to be seen, however, if she can successfully compete with the one and only Elsa Maxwell, ringmaster de luxe of the gayest group in international society.

Do Soap and Water Dry Your Skin?

Soap and water dry out the natural oils in the skin and make it dry, rough and red and sensitive to sun and wind. An excellent way to restore suppleness to the skin and make it soft, smooth and white, is to rub into your hands and face, after each washing, a few drops of a mixture of sea moss and glycerin. Sea moss is a noted skin whitener and softener, while glycerin is a splendid balm. In combination, the two make an exceptional skin lotion. You can buy this lotion already prepared at any good drug or department store. It is called Nepto Lotion and costs only 30c a bottle.

A few drops of Nepto Lotion rubbed into the hands or face make rough, red, dry or cracked skin luxuriously soft and white. It also relieves and prevents chapping, chafing, windburn and sunburn. Rub a little into your skin before going out and it will protect your skin from the withering effect of sun and wind. Women who do their own housework will find Nepto Lotion a dandy way to keep their hands from showing it. Nepto Lotion is a naturally good thing for the skin: can do no harm whatever. Contains no grease to clog the pores and catch dirt. Rubs in dry and smooth, so you can powder over it. Very economical, too, as a little goes a long way.

IT WOULD seem that there is nothing left to desire in evening clothes this winter. Young things look entrancing in them and the older women appear more striking than they have for years. The other evening, attending the theater, we could not help but notice how many women impressed us as being unusually beautiful. Probably they were no lovelier feature for feature than in past evenings, other years, yet we discovered a subtle difference—they all looked more at ease! Silly, you say? Perhaps so, but do you remember how feverishly eager to seem animated everyone looked in short, uncompromisingly straight dresses? One actually had to be in order to carry the unbecoming lines off graciously.

FEELING AT home in clothes is the real secret of poise and it adds youthfulness to one's face far more than anything else. Enough of this—we will progress to actual cases!

THERE IS more than one reason why evening gowns are so flattering to the mature figure. There is the sweeping line of skirts that permits one to be positively majestic. There are decolletages that take splendid shoulders and matured backs to carry off well. There are dozens of little details that contribute their bit to dignity and elegance. The pre-eminence of black and white, too, for what is more flattering to graying or white hair? And fabrics—rich silks that drape to perfection. Fabrics are so beautiful in themselves this year that they need only clever cutting to make them superb.

VELVET IS an ideal choice for a woman who tends to weight. Lame and materials with sheen should only be worn by her who knows her figure has retained a lithness.

THE VELVET gown pictured is ideal for dinner and theater wear, and its various smart features are taken from designs by Paquin, Lanvin and Vionnet. It is of Peacock blue silk velvet, the neckline draped to a medium V which is caught by a bow of the velvet across the back; the small puff sleeves are unusually attractive. Cleverly seamed sections fit the hips closely, and the skirt is gracefully full, a small train emerging from fins shirring. A narrow belt is of the velvet.

THE BACK of the frock is of great importance according to Chanel whose genius has brought about so many popular styles. She brings the back forward into the limelight by adorning it with bustle drapes, panels and shirrings. The apron effect of the bustle drape characterizes many of her smartest new designs.

2 Houses Damaged in Wild Auto Ride

Greenlun's wrecked machine, shown below, first crashed into a parked auto, then into a house at 378 Hyde Park ave., and finally brought up against a piazza at 372 Hyde Park ave. Grace Will Not Lend Money to Gigi

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Wilda Gardner, bookkeeper in a hardware store, is in love with Logan Townsend. He is no Adonis, Wilda thinks, but "he has a rare smile." Wilda's father dies and her mother, Gracie, becomes a different woman when the lawyers say the estate will amount to $100,000. She plans a trip to Europe. Wilda has a wonderful time at a house party where Logan asks her to marry him. Myrtle, who is determined to win Logan, turns up at the dock as Wilda boards steamer for Europe. Logan's leave-taking is affectionate. In Paris Gracie becomes interested in Mr. Gigi Cortes. But Wilda sighs for Logan, and wishes he was with her. A Marquis becomes attentive to Wilda.

"BUT MOTHER, he wouldn't read what's in the letters. And you know he and Gigi are sharing an apartment here, and I think he could get access to them."

A ray of hope flickered in the wet eyes that were looking so piteously at Wilda.

"You don't think, then, that he's the same type as Gigi?"

"No. No." But Wilda in her heart was not at all assured of this. What about the old proverb?—"Birds of a feather——"

"Madame, I am sorry, but I owe the Casino 40,000 francs. And some investments of mine have gone wrong in Paris. The brokers assure me that I require 50,000 francs at once—for margin. I beg you to let me have it."

And Gigi Cortes faced his opposite sweetheart in her private parlor.

New Eyes
Gracie Sees Gigi

Gracie looked at him through new eye now. Most resolutely, she had been awakened to his real character.

"I can't give you the money. And it's out of the question that I lunch with you today or any other time —"

"You insist, then, on this foolish story?"

"I saw and heard you, below the balcony of the Potinere last night"—her voice trembled.

He took quick advantage. "Grace! Cherie! It was not I! You love me—so you are jealous and without reason."

He took a step toward her, as though to embrace her.

She backed away from him as though he were a rattlesnake. "Don't lie, I repeat, I saw you and heard you."

"There is no other woman—only you. I swear I just returned today from Paris."

"Please leave me—that is the only decent thing that you can do. And give me back those letters."

"Ah——" His face changed at that. "So you never opened them? You have only been playing with me, writing me those sweet words of love? What you call 'keeding'?"

Gracie Refuses
To Loan Gigi Money

"Give them back to me."

"So there is someone else?" His eyes narrowed. "I am not rich enough? You like the stout American gentleman?"

The crimson fled from her cheeks. He saw the flush. And it gave him his cue to threaten.

"Ha! Wherever my back is turned, I haf been supplanted by Mesater Gordon?"

"Don't drag a decent man's name into this conversation!"

"You take than tone with me? You refuse to give me the $3,500 that will save me from absolute ruin?"

"I can't afford such a sum."

"But you always told me you were a rich woman!"

"I'm not," cried Gracie desperately. Her lips were shaking.

He glared at her. "No, you have deceived me all along! You make a fool of me! Then I will keep your letters—sit for tat—and what is more, because you have not played me fair, I will show your letters to Mesater Gordon!"

Alone with her own sore heart, his threats echoing in her ears, Grace was now willing to

Residents of Hyde Park ave., Roslindale, were aroused early today when an alleged drunken driver crashed his auto into a parked car and continued along the avenue at breakneck speed, finally landing the machine under a piazza after it crashed through a fence.

At City Hospital he was found to be suffering from abrasions and lacerations of the head and body. Officers who went to the scene found Greenlun on the lawn.

2 BANDITS BEAT STORE OWNER

After beating a Roxbury variety store proprietor into a state of unconsciousness today, two men dragged their victim behind a counter and ransacked the cash rifling the cash register of $12.

The victim was Samuel Bloom, 24, of 778 Shawmut ave., Roxbury. The attack took place in his store at 780 Shawmut ave.

Wilkins Here Tonight to Tell of His Adventures

Boston will hear tonight, first hand, the thrilling adventures of Sir George Hubert Wilkins, explorer, pioneer movie cameraman and hero of the Hearst Arctic expedition.

Sir Capt. Wilkins is due at the Copley Plaza at 6:30 p. m. today and will lecture tonight before the Temple Israel Brotherhood at Temple Israel Meeting House.

He will tell of his experiences in previous years when he crossed the world in the huge dirigible Zeppelin when he was reporting the flight from Germany to America for the Hearst newspapers.

And a wealth of other experiences well be related by the eminent explorer who, as early as 1910, rode the air currents with men who set out on flimsy framework supported by even more flimsy wings.

STUDIES AVIATION

In that year Sir George had the first taste of aviation when he went under instruction of Curtiss first name-White, then one of the world's leading birdmen.

From then on he has used flying and aviation extensively, but his exciting experiences are not wholly of the air.

Two years after his first flight with Claude Graham-White, the hero of the frozen places entered the field of exploration by joining the Canadian Arctic Expedition as official photographer.

Since then his existence has been a series of excitements in strange places and strange situations many of which he will detail during his picture tonight.

ON GRAF ZEPPELIN

His trip to the Antarctic thrilled the world particularly when he acted in the dual role of explorer and reporter.

When Sir Capt. Wilkins returned for the first time to America he was selected to take the Graf Zeppelin on its epoch making flight and to report it both for leaders of Hearst publications.

His efforts were publicly rewarded on his return to England when he was knighted by the King.

The Bird, your agent reported to the Hearst publications during explorer's recent trip, "scoops" everything in sight and for a man who originally was a navy pilot, Wilkins was a natural born explorer, as he was born in the South Seas of English parents who were visiting Australia.

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned into the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip. If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Pictures of unusual animal poses are wanted, too. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use in the American.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or an unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. Of course, the first one who turns in the tip in an interesting event receives the award on that particular item. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

MARLBORO CASH SYSTEM HIT

The manner in which the city of Marlboro handles its accounts was severely criticized today by Theodore N. Waddell, director of the state division of accounts.

His criticism was based upon an audit of the books of the city of Marlboro covering a period from Jan. 3, 1929, to Sept. 6, 1930, made by Edward H. Fenton, chief accountant of the department.

In a letter to Mayor A. A. Marie of Marlboro Director Waddell said: "In checking the original vouchers and payrolls, it was noted appropriations for community playgrounds and Spanish War veterans have been paid over to the treasurers of these organizations. This practice should be discontinued and all bills should be paid by the city treasurer. Payments have been made for transportation of pupils to high school athletic games and also for liability insurance on privately owned automobiles used on city business."

The report also called the attention of the mayor to the fact certain departments voted receipts in addition to appropriations for their use.

Judge Miles declared the occasion to be one of the happiest of his life and asked for co-operation of police, court attaches, the bar and probation officers.

After a short recess, during which he was honored at a reception in the lobby, Judge Miles heard his first case.

He found Benjamin Berman guilty of promoting a lottery and fined him $75. Arthur Seltzer, charged with the same offense, was found not guilty.

OTHERS WERE GOOD

Besides these prize winners the judges found another good resolutions each of which, if kept by its maker will be worth much more to him than the first prize.

The judges were Pres. Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University, Pres. Frank E. Spear of Northeastern University and Judge Sadie Lipner Shulman.

WINNER HAPPY

"The Boston Evening American is always doing something to cause people to think," young Ray said when notified of his good fortune in winning first prize in such a large field of contestants.

"I have often entered various educational contests conducted by this newspaper, but never won any money before. This is a glorious surprise, and it makes me proud and happy that the judges considered my idea worthy of first prize."

Louis Ray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gibbons of Camden st., Boston.

Among the good resolutions awarded prizes of $2 each were the following:

"I firmly resolve to be the guy my mother thinks I am."—by Joseph M. Jay, Dorchester.

"Resolving to live and act by the golden rule. Although in prison, to try to be happy and loyal to the state and my fellow prisoners; to prepare for the day when I can be worthy of assuming the duties and obligations of honest citizenship; to prove that crime does not pay."—by Albert W. Bartlett, Charlestown State Prison.

TO FACE FACTS

"I resolve for 1931 to face the facts unflinchingly and dare to do my duty as I understand it, with the profound belief that the beginning of wisdom is the desire of discipline."—by Jacob Dress of Providence.

"As I grow older in years I realize how futile is life unless interspersed with good deeds. Men are too prone to condemn and forget. I resolve, therefore, to be more tolerant and kind, to do my best to help my fellow men in need and be nice unto others if"—by Louis F. Montani, Revere.

Another good resolution was that of Mrs. B. Y. Kelly of Spencer.

"I resolve to do the next thing, no matter how trivial, with care and enthusiasm, knowing that my inner feelings and my attitude are what really count and that moral strength and fortitude prepare one for fuller living, spiritually and materially."

Best New Year Resolutions Picked

Lifer in State Prison Wins Good Resolutions Prize

Out of the gray atmosphere of the State prison in Charlestown came a set of New Year resolutions and today Albert W. Bartlett, a lifer, and one of those who helped put down the prison mutiny of 1929, is known as the author of the best resolutions sent in by the prisoners of the state.

Not the first prize winner of the second prize nor the third by Bartlett's resolutions gave him a place among the 25 other winners, even if one part of them probably never can be put into effect.

Bartlett, confessed murderer of Frank E. Small in the Cozy Pharmacy, Bowdoin st. Dec. 22, made a resolution that contains 52

TO PROVE CRIME FAILS

The "lifer" resolves, he says, "to live and act by the Golden Rule. Although in prison I try to be happy and loyal to the state and my fellow-prisoners; to prepare for the day when I can be worthy of assuming the duties and obligations of honest citizenship; to prove that crime does not pay."

But Bartlett, back of prison bars may not be able to live up to that part of his resolution that has to do with the duties and obligations of honest citizenship.

When Bartlett, after pleading guilty to second degree murder, was sentenced to life in prison for the murder of Small in 1922 it was on agreement with the parole board that the prisoner would interfere with his sentence.

HOPE STILL LIVES

But now a minor son of the late Daniel H. Bartlett, clerk of courts in Middlesex county, has been in many conferences in Massachusetts and is reported to be the final solution center.

WIDOWS BATTLE IN BIG ESTATE

A battle over petition for allowance of the accounting of the late Atty. James M. Hallowell, as executor of the $2,400,000 estate of Arthur A. Carey of Waltham, was begun today in Middlesex Probate Court.

It was a battle of two widows, the widow of the late executor and the widow of the testator, the latter alleging counsel fees listed are excessive.

Interest was added to the case through the fact most of the property involved is New York real estate, left Carey by members of the Astor family in Manhattan.

Atty. Hallowell, who died in 1928 was a former assistant attorney general of Massachusetts and was associated with Justice Hammond of the Massachusetts Supreme Court and later with the firm of Mayberry Knowlton & Mayberry.

Carey, who died in 1923 was a grandson of John Jacob Astor and was well known as a philanthropist. He was a resident of Cambridge.

He was a Harvard graduate and an artist of note, and for a time following his graduation from Harvard in 1875 was an instructor in English at the university.

His widow was the former Agnes L. M. Whiteside, and they have two sons and two daughters.

State Policewoman Given Clean Bill in Shooting

Miss Lotta Caldwell, State policewoman, will not be disciplined or discharged from the service as a result of opening her gun to Hugh S. Mullen of Pinckney st., with whom she accidentally wounded himself and a public mechanic New Years Day.

This was revealed today when Capt. Charles D. Beaupre of the [illegible] announced that the case was closed. He said:

"The matter is entirely personal. My investigation has ceased with the finding that neither the gun, automobile, blackjack or badge, found in Mullen's possession, is State property, therefore we are not concerned with it."

Capt. Beaupre said he had learned the blackjack had been given to Miss Caldwell by her father; the badge, that of a private investigator, had been found by the policewoman, and the gun had been purchased by her personally.

In her report, Miss Caldwell denied Mullen, a B. & M. trainman was her fiancee but said she had given him permission to take her car from a Commercial st. garage any time he wished.

It was in this garage he shot the mechanic and himself. Mullen was sentenced by Judge Down to 18 months for carrying a loaded revolver.

SCHOOL BOARD HIT IN BILL

Veiled charges of inefficiency were hurled at the school committee today in a bill filed by Rep. Lewis H. Sullivan of Boston, for a change in the election of members.

Abolition of the pardon powers of the parole board was advocated in a bill filed by Sen. Michael J. Ward of Roxbury. Rep. John F. Murphy of Brighton asked restatement of a discharged Boston policeman in another bill.

Sullivan's bill would provide for election of school committeemen by districts, with the city divided into seven sections. His provisions would raise the membership from five to seven.

"The committee does not always act as the public wants it to and election by districts would tend to make it more sensitive to the needs in its districts," he said.

"In this way, a man in a district could see that the public monies are not wasted through purchase of land for schools that never reach the building stage."

He cited districts as Wards 1, 2 and 3; Wards 4, 5, 21 and 22; Wards 12, 19 and 20; Wards 13, 15 and 16 and Wards 14, 17 and 18.

Sen. Ward would place the power of advisory on pardons with a new commission of five to be appointed by the Governor, a system of diversified terms to provide against all terminating at once.

The policeman sponsored by Rep. Murphy is James E. McCarthy, who was discharged on Nov. 18, 1929. His bill provides that consent of Mayor and City Council must be obtained.

Patrolman McCarthy was attached to the Brighton station when charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, involving liquor, were placed against him.

Your Silhouette Cast In Made!

And it is from Etienne de Silhouette French Minister of Finance in 1759, that people today owe the name of the unique art in portraiture known as silhouette. Strangely enough it was the edict of economy following the great war of that period that turned the trend from the extravagant luxury and elegance of the old court splendor days to peasant simplicity. Along with the extreme severity of coats without folds and frills—snuff boxes of plain wood unadorned with jewels came outline or "silhouette" portraits instead of painted master pieces costing thousands of francs. Now fashion has turned back to page in history for inspiration. The quaint charm reminiscent of olden days has thus brought "silhouette" again into favor. Just drop into Filene's Gift Shop anytime during the day—you'll find people of all ages having their own profiles made from life in two minutes! These portraits are not drawn—sketched or painted but cut with scissors. And by Lawrence Grax, who is one of the foremost silhouette artists in the country. 'Heart Torn,' She Fears He Is Slipping Away

—By BEATRICE FAIRFAX—

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I read your column every night, but never thought I would have to ask you for advice, but I was mistaken. I am a girl of 20 and very much in love with a fellow the same age. I met him through my cousin's boy friend. He asked my cousin if he could take me out and make a four as we go to a show or dance. My cousin agreed, as I had told her I liked him. Soon I was going with him steadily. He is very nice to me and always acts like a gentleman. About a month ago we went to a dance and he met a very pretty girl, who played up to him and still does. He gives her much of his attention, and Oh, Miss Fairfax, I can feel him slipping away from me. It tears my heart out, and I also feel hurt, as my friends always remark how brazen this girl is. He tells me he still loves me, but the other girl attracts him. What shall I do? HEARTBROKEN.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Heartbroken:—There are some things in life that we can do justly by force, but conduct and regulating some other person's actions is one of them. You can do one of two things—either tell your friend to choose between you, or wait until he tires of this other girl and comes back to you.

Men have few illusions. They are not brought up on poetry and the importance of live as are girls, and when they see some hard-faced little creature who attracts them, they will leave love and all it means to run after the flame for a while.

Is There a Chance?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

After reading your column and seeing how you have helped others, I have decided to tell you my story. I met a boy a few weeks ago whom I like very much and I am sure he likes me, but he seems to be a confirmed bachelor because he continually speaks of a girl whom he once liked, but who threw him over. Do you think there is any chance for me? FLUFF

Dear Fluff: Doubtless the young man's reference to some other girl is simply a signal to you that you are not to take him too seriously. A confirmed bachelor is one of the hardest creatures in the world to impress. He is an easy mark, a well, and suspicious of all your kindness, no matter how guileless they may be.

Be Patient for a Few Years

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We are both girls of 13 years and very popular and fairly good looking. Our mothers are very strict and won't let us go out at night. We think we are in love with two boys of our own age who are in love with us. Richard loves Mary and Charles loves me.

Would it be all right for us to accept invitations to shows, etc? MARY AND CYNTHIA.

Dear Mary and Cynthia: Can't you be patient for a few more years? Your parents are wise not to allow you out at night at your age. Thirteen is much too young to be running around nights with boys. A party once in a while at home to which you can invite your friends is all you may expect until you are three or four years older. By no means should you accept invitations from boys to shows or parties without your parents' consent.

Bright Prints for Dull Days

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 Many are the fashionable women who see themselves in print these days. And it doesn't have to be on the society page of the newspapers, either.

It's right in their own mirrors. And in some of the best looking printed dresses you've seen for many a day.

Winter prints, these are. And one of the best tonics we know of for mid-winter wardrobe dumps! You can't be blue in one of them—not even if the background of the print is navy, as many of them are.

And so they'll look well on spring avenues without a coat.

If you have a favorite type of dress—a tunic dress, or a peplum one or a boxed dress or one with a draped neckline, or practically any other good fashion you can have it in one of these winter prints. Because these smart patterns are the kind that can be made into any sort of dress.

Small Spaced Designs

Most of them are small neatly spaced designs some of them quite tailored like the tweed prints and the conventional design sketched at the left

Other are not quite so tailored but still small and spaced, like the one at the right

A few of them are larger designs, like the one at the center But the colors of these are very subtly blended, giving the effect of two tones of one color with a brighter color in a small accented spot. The large design is not prominent enough to require a special type of dress to set it off Plaids are one of the smartest midwinter prints. And if you want something very new, the little Persian prints, similar to Paisley designs, will give it to you

Combinations of plain and printed silks make an interesting dress. You'll find these in plain dresses with jackets of print. Or a plain dress with yoke and sleeves of a print.

This is a potentially good idea if your coat happens to be shorter than your dress, because then the plain dark color of the dress hangs below the coat

Lots of these new winter prints have small touches of clear white in them. The design illustrated at the right is a good example of how it's done

This white not only makes an effective contrast with the dark background and the bright design, but it makes a pretty setup with lingerie collars and cuffs

The dress you choose happens to have them

Lingerie Touches

The dress we've just sketched has this lingerie touch And it's a fine example of the kind of dress in which prints are most successfully used

It's simple in line, displaying the design of the print to best advantage. In fact it's so simple it would be called tailored if it weren't for the softening effect of the scalloped collar and cuffs

Notice that the skirt is easily full but plain cloth is pleated and most in fashion skirts do. This would be a fine dressmaker winter dress to help brighten dull winter days.

Charming Plan for Party

By MRS. REECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. REECKMAN:

I am divorced and am planning to be married again. I would like very much to be married in a small village church we own, this summer when touring. Would it be correct to invite our friends, or would it be better to have a very private wedding?

PEARL.

Wouldn't it be possible to combine both of these ideas? That is, couldn't you invite a few of your closest friends and ask them to come to the church? I think that this plan would be charming.

Telegram of Congratulations

DEAR MRS. REECKMAN:

When sending a telegram to a man who is very dear acquaintance offering congratulations on his birthday, how would you suggest wording it?

ESTELLE.

It's rather difficult for a more "third person" to make such a personal suggestion but since you have honored me with the privilege I suggest that you might word this fete day telegram "All high hearted wishes to you for your birthday happiness and for your happiness every hour of the year that is coming

A Little Informal Hospitality

DEAR MRS. REECKMAN

My girl friends are always inviting me to their houses to spend an evening and lately I have been making excuses for not accepting Here is the trouble I would like to ask them to my home and to give a party but my mother is dead. GRETTE

I think it would be charming every once in a while to plan a little informal party at your home, and invite some of your friends and some of his. This would be thoroughly correct, and could be made a most delightful event. There needn't be much trouble about it. . . . Invite your friends for tea some Saturday or Sunday afternoon, or for supper some evening. Have very simple delicious things to eat, and plan some sort of entertainment besides, "talking of the weather" if you think that the most necessary Usually it isn't necessary to do about this planning at once, and you will have more time and more simplicity. Think of the formal hospitality I don't like. think of your not accepting this sweet hospitality offered by your girl friends, and it really isn't necessary for you to have Paris the first party you give. But we help, if you have any. Let us know if we need look to the pathway of hospitality to you. being a fine gesture on the part of simplicity. It is one of the great things in the world

(Mrs. Reeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Don't Be Too Quick to Condemn People

By WINIFRED BLACK

THEY HAD a bad accident out in San Francisco the other day.

Two street cars crashed in a tunnel and some people were killed and some people were injured

One little boy lived, but he will never walk again.

And one elderly woman had something happen to her eyes and it is doubtful whether she will ever see at all any more.

Winifred Black

It all happened, it is said, because the conductor dropped a fifty-cent piece and stopped the car to pick up the money. He said he was so excited about losing half a dollar that he forgot about cars coming behind him.

He got his fifty-cent piece and then the crash came

The condemnation feels terrible about it and, of course, the street car company The people who were injured and the families of those who were killed are terribly sorry.

It's all very tragic and more than a little pathetic

To wreck a car is bad enough but to wreck it for the sake of a fifty-cent piece is almost criminal.

Still, that's what it is.

Don't be too hard on the conductor

Maybe you have come a little bit near wrecking your car in your time.

There is the young nephew from the country who came to visit and go to school.

You filled him up to the full and well made and strong and good natured and virtuous as an infant than the average country nephew who comes to visit and go to school. But he said, "supper" instead of dinner and once you came home and found him eating his luncheon in the kitchen instead of the dining room.

And then you saw him chumming with another young fellow in dingy corduroy pants and a grimy sweater and you made up your mind that your nephew was "low." And you told him so and the nephew proved to you that his temper was high enough to suit anybody, even if he was "low."

And so he packed up and left and went to live with another uncle and it turned out that the young fellow in the dirty corduroys and the nasty sweater was an inventor working in a laboratory where he couldn't keep as neat as was even if he tried, and he really didn't seem to have time to try very hard—what with chemicals and experiments and ideas

And he isn't "low" at all. He is really rather "high" if you look at it that way and before he gets through he is likely to be very "high" indeed so his professors say

And the young nephew is out of school and he is going very well thank you in an excellent job and one for himself, and the one who didn't care whether the nephew said supper or dinner is so proud of him that he bores every one to death talking about him

And there is the time you ran off your own brother because he married a girl who was not just exactly, well, why put a name to it, and your brother died alone in a far country and very poor

And you dream of him sometimes and he is always calling to his home when you dream of him and when you wake up you find it's not

And one and many of us wreck a good many things for the sake of something just as small and sometimes a good deal smaller than half a dollar—just that little

Elderly Folk Should Curb Too Keen an Appetite

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

WE ARE always more or less concerned as to what food is best for the elderly people. Unfortunately it is not always possible to find the kind of food for the elderly which people suffer greatly by reason of diet and digestion. Long life is by no means always the result of a lifetime of indigestion. Many people who have lived temperately and carefully shortened its consequence

Dr. Copeland

As we grow older our need for food becomes less At the same time our need for rest and less work becomes greater. Food is not nearly as essential in older people as it is to youth. Youth must grow and develop. In order to do this, plenty of nourishing food is needed. As we grow older we do not expend as much energy and do not use muscles as much, so a smaller amount is required

Appetite may be keen and strong, but this should be curbed. Overeating habits acquired in middle years are remembered, and if continued, will lead to fatal disease.

One of the common difficulties in old age is disease of the power of chewing. Steaks and roasts now become more difficult to chew. Instead of these, soups, milk and soft-boiled eggs should be substituted

In view of the slowing up of the digestive processes as we grow older, fats should be used sparingly We should not overload in the diet rich sauces cakes and pies and pastries. All fried foods should be eliminated from the diet

Many old people are constipated, and complain bitterly of their difficulties in keeping warm. Whatever energy they have is needed to control the body heat. Warm foods and drinks, and warm clothing are necessary. Cold foods and drinks are not necessary and are not helpful. Fruits and vegetables are a necessary part of the diet. Vegetables will often cause much distress in old people. They should be cooked so that they will be tender. Fruits may be given as juices or stewed pulp, and the vegetables should be well cooked and mashed, or served in the form of soup or purée.

The more simple the food and the more temperate the consumption the better. Success in managing the diet of men and women in advanced years demands the same study as is more commonly given the babies.

Blessings Ignored Until We Lose Them

—By HELEN ROWLAND—

GOOD TEETH, a good digestion, a good reputation and a good wife are blessings, which a man never stops to think about until he loses them.

The little boy who is not permitted to believe in Santa Claus will grow up to be the little business man with the stultified soul Because, everything else—art, poetry, engineering, architecture and even big business—requires a highly developed imagination.

It's a pity that women no longer use curl-papers; so that SOME one could be made of the reams of advice the younger generation printed in the newspapers.

Love is what makes a girl prefer a bitter scrap in the rumble seat with one man to a petting party in a limousine with another man.

All this talk about harnessing the sun and making it do all the work of men is causing some wives a lot of nervous apprehension, at the vision of having a man puttering around the house and smashing in the refrigerator seven days a week.

Any views about women held by a man past forty are unimportant, says Ben Hecht, the novelist. How sad! And, wasn't it H. L. Mencken (who recently married at the mellow age of fifty), who once declared that no man over thirty should fall in love?

Every man loves to be mothered—a little; and every woman loves to be bossed—a little. And nobody loves a guardian, a keeper, a reformer or a jailor

A woman is always happiest when she is doing something for a man or sacrificing something for him—and complaining about it

Those due for the hardest fall are the man of the hour—and the girl of the moment.

Her face flushed with shame when she thought of the idiotic love words she had put on paper

And to such a roller!

Crazy she'd been But now her senses were returning to her

She hadn't loved him no But the attentions of the handsome youth had swept her off her feet and made an utter fool of her.

To be sure about with a devoted young swain had flattered her ego immensely

Now he was threatening to mail those incriminating letters to her one true friend, Bob Gordon

And she couldn't bear to be humiliated so! To be lowered in Bob's good opinion!

Why had she preferred Gigi to a decent man like that? Mistaken dross for gold . . . and let the gold go by her . . .

And this not in the financial sense (though Bob was very well-to-do) but in terms of real character

She sat alone and wept. Alone she would walk down the dreary path of middle age till she was old . . . She was nobody that really loved her.

It was horrible to think that she had made a spectacle of herself with Gigi Cortes . . . a "gigolo" . . . and worse . . . he was nothing but a common blackmailer!

A few would be pitying her and all the others laughing at her!

And now—too late—she saw the worth of Bob, whose kindly advances in the past few weeks she had slighted . . .

She'd get those letters back from Gigi now! She must! She dried her eyes, called up his apartment in Juan, asked him to meet her in half an hour in the Casino, "because I have decided to help you out in your financial troubles, provided that you bring those letters with you," she said smugly.

Then to her bank for ninety thousand francs. When she met him she had the money in an envelope

He had a packet, too He took her out on the terrace, privately beyond the Bar which was at the moment empty

"Madame, you are too kind "

"There are nine bills here—each of ten thousand francs" She drew them from the envelope and counted them, but still keeping hold of them.

His dark eyes gleamed. "Madame, you are so sweet. You have forgive me?"

"If you give me back my letters, well call quits, though please understand I'm absolutely through with you"

"Cherie, I mevaire meant those things that I have said. He put his hand out towards the bills

"I apologize—humbly."

"Give me my letters, please"

"They are all here." He handed her the packet and simultaneously she handed him the money

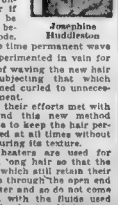
New Beauty by Rewaving the Old Permanent

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

WE ALL know, either from our own experience or from that of our friends, that it isn't wise to have a new permanent wave put into hair which already retains some of the previous one Yet there comes a time when the old permanent is so nearly gone that something must be done to the new, uncurled hair if it is to be dressed in a becoming mode.



Josephine Huddleston

For some time permanent wave experts experimented in vain for a method of waving the new hair without subjecting that which still remained curled to unnecessary treatment.

Recently their efforts met with success, and this new method permits one to keep the hair perfectly waved at all times without fear of injuring its texture.

Special heaters are used for those with long hair so that the long ends which still retain their wave come through the open end of the heater and so do not come in contact with the fluids used or with the heat. Medium or short hair does not require the special heaters, however for short ends can be kept out of harms way very easily.

Another pleasing feature of the latest developments in rewaving the hair is that all manufacturers of permanent wave preparations as well as the individual operators have adopted their methods to fit this need Instead of all being restricted to one method This is most important because it permits one to have exactly the same type of wave put into the new growth as that which was placed in the hair originally

The preliminary treatment of the hair when having one or two waves placed in the new growth is exactly the same as when an original permanent is had Then the hair is wound in exactly the same way as it was for the original wave. If the previous waving was from the scalp toward the ends of the hair, the same plan is followed until the hair which retains the old wave is reached. If the hair was wound onto the curlers from the ends toward the scalp, instead of placing the curlers at the very ends of the hair, they are set just above the last trace of curl in the ends and then wound on the curler toward the scalp.

In either event, the ends which still retain their curl are left free so that when the sachets containing the waving fluids are used they come in contact only with the new growth of hair which has been wound on the curlers.

1931 Faith in New England Expressed by Leaders

NEW ENGLAND business and finance have stepped into 1931 with hope and optimism as their keynote. Outstanding leaders believe the future holds good promise.

Bankers and executives of major corporations, stock exchange leaders and others today express their belief that 1931 will bring us progress on the road to restored prosperity.

The prevalent opinion in well-informed circles in Boston and the rest of New England is epitomized by Matt B. Jones, president of the New England Telephone Co., planning continued expansion. President Jones says in part:

"Our outlook on the future is best expressed in our construction budget of $27,000,000 for 1931, which is approximately a half million more than the average construction budget of the past five years.

"New England still retains all its advantages of diversified industry, skilled craftsmanship and efficient management."

Faith in New England and its material prospects is expressed by President Jones.

Cheerfulness Characterizes 1931's Debut

Strength Exhibited on Principal Commodity and Security Exchanges

By B. C. Forbes

New York, Jan. 5—The year has opened encouragingly for wheat and corn raisers, for cotton growers, for owners of stocks, for bondholders.

Should these classes enjoy a period of rising prices, prosperity would return much quicker than generally expected. Once we swallow, however, does not mean the arrival of summer. The year just closed brought several false upward starts.

B. C. Forbes

The strength exhibited on the principal commodity and security exchanges if sufficient, nevertheless, to suggs. that bearishness was overdone towards the end of last year

The events of 1930 fooled almost everyone. At the beginning of the year opinion was virtually unanimous that some measure of general improvement would be experienced as the year advanced. As we now all know, things went from bad to worse. Instead of the final quarter proving the best, as had been freely predicted, it proved the worst in practically every direction.

Stocks tumbled as far from their 1930 spring peak as they had tumbled from their 1929 peak during the panic, registering a total far greater than ever before known. Wheat sold at prices not matched in 34 years.

Cotton was down to pre-war quotations. Silver made the worst showing in all history. Rubber and sugar dropped below cost of production. Copper shared the general fate. So did most other products

Mild recovery has been registered in not a few directions since 1930 opened. Wheat and corn are both somewhat above their recent minimum. Cotton has had a moderate rally, selling above 10 cents in New York Copper, at 10¼ cents, is up a full cent and appears to be gaining in strength.

On the other hand, beef and pork have lately weakened. So has rubber Hides still drag at last year's bottom. Steel shows no resiliency

Most statistics covering the final week of the year were unfavorable. Railway traffic is down. So are bank clearings. Commercial failures are numerous. The general price level again sagged. Retail trade reports were not cheerful. In short, the year ended true to form.

Re-engaging of workers at the start of the year is reported from several centers, notably Akron the rubber capital of the world. Two other motor plants have also increased their working forces. Lewis new board about having. If work ers suggesting that the peak of unemployment has been reached except that building naturally will be restricted during winter months in the colder regions of the continent.

Last week brought two far-reaching developments. Agreement by Eastern railroad heads upon four consolidation plans on the initiative of President Hoover, is not only important in itself but signifies that merger progress will likely be announced in other parts of the country.

Predictions that final approval will not be sanctioned by the Interstate Commerce Commission moving toward the end of the year probably will prove wide of the mark.

I understand that the commissioners have been intimately consulted right along and that they have let it become known that they indorse the whole movement, in principle. Therefore, speedy action should be possible. The effect upon sentiment and upon enterprise cannot fail to be beneficial.

The reduction in the French bank rate to 2 per cent, following similar action at New York betokens the close co-operation established among the world's leading financial centers.

The United States and France both have far more gold than necessary, whereas London's supply has been heavily drawn upon especially by Paris. This lop-sided gold situation promises to be remedied or at least modified, as a result of plans now actively under consideration.

That 1931 will straighten our many problems and many tangles cannot be doubted.

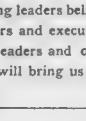
Rukeyser Predicts Gradual Recuperation

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, Jan. 5—Business is perpetually in the process of getting better or becoming worse. Nineteen thirty-one promises to be a year of gradual, if somewhat irregular, economic recuperation.



M. S. Rukeyser

There is a reason to hope that the trend will be the reverse of 1930, during which trade in the aggregate became more subnormal as the period advanced.

In 1931, it seems more likely that the first quarter will be the worst, and the fourth quarter the best. Unless unpredictable events occur, it ought to be unmistakably apparent by the spring that the depression has gone through the valley, and that the upward slope is at hand.

From that point, progress in the direction of making business less subnormal should be more clearly discernible. The hope that business will return to computed normal not later than the first half of 1932 seems warranted

If these expectations of even gradual and partial recovery of prosperity are justified, there would appear to be little warrant for putting out additional long term lines of stock by speculators at the present time

After a typical mild depression culminating in mid-June, a year after business attained its prosperity peak, there followed instead of the widely expected improvement, a downward plunge to a lower level of maximum depression. The combination has resulted in subnormal business approaching record breaking proportions in respect to time.

There have been unusual time lags also among the various interrelated economic indices, yet there is every reason to believe that in due course the pattern of forms processes of economic recovery will be broadly followed

Two Factors of Delay

Two fundamental factors have delayed recovery. First, the preceding boom whose excesses were to be licked for the current depression, was unusually long in duration and wide in its upward sweep. Secondly, well intentioned efforts to interfere with the business cycle and to mitigate its effects created causes of lag of a psychological and moratorium, which spread the process of readjustment over a longer period

Instead of taking the bitter medicine of deflation and getting over with it quickly, we experimented with softening the cure This latter comment does not mean that all efforts to mitigate the swings of the business cycle will do more harm than good.

Efforts this last time were started too late; they would have been more effective if they involved putting the brakes on the earlier runaway prosperity

Fundamentals point to a recovery first in the United States, which will gradually spread out to other parts of the world. More effective than any ordinary palliatives is the simple ministration of time and events.

In spite of the changing whims of executives and financiers, life processes go on pretty much the same through the years. Accordingly, between June, 1929, and June 1931, consumers will have gained forward using up accumulated supplies of merchandise, with which they were pretty well loaded up at the top of the recent prosperity cycle

As the age of Wellesley Hills in dicated depression lasts only as long as it takes the average man to wear out two pairs of pants. As a matter of fact, the decline of consumers' purchases of goods, going directly into consumption, has been slight compared with the falling off in production

Complete Turnabout Seen

This means that retail purchasers have gradually eaten into inventories in stores, in jobbers' warehouses and in manufacturers' hands. When the normal wear and tear of raw materials will be seen to be exaggerated when public purchasing power gains and executives suddenly tire of remaining pessimistic.

When the mental change comes, it will entail a complete turnabout, as the business world quickly recognize that stocks on hand in many directions are sub-normal.

The collective decision to return to normal inventories would be enough to supply the impetus which would result in motion the processes of recovery—quietly and unostentatiously.

The psychological news event of the year will occur at the psychological moment when the turn comes, and how with the delay in getting our statistics we may not know that the event has occurred until a late time, when the curves of business can be observed from a better perspective.

The economic equilibrium has been upset by the disposition of consumers to disobey the so-called law of obsolescence in respect to intermediate goods, such as automobiles and homes. For an extended period, normal replacement has not taken place.

In a spirit of economy, the public has found that it could squeeze more utility from what they already owned. But this process of postponement cannot be carried on indefinitely.

At length for example, automobiles will reach a stage where it is no longer economic to run obsolete cars. Families will outgrow old dwellings. Real prosperity depends on residential building and on automobiles, but I think some sign of a turn in general business must precede rather than follow a pickup in these trades.

This does not mean that buyers will wait for the later stages of the prosperity cycle. Those with available funds, which have been hoarded during the economic storm, will be more disposed to buy, as soon as there are unmistakable signs that the broad economic outlook is better

Thus, the old law that nothing succeeds like success will be fulfilled. In spite of the pentup demand for cars and residential buildings of certain types, the depression has been so far-reaching that buyers are likely to be conservative toward such commitments for a considerable period, and it therefore seems unlikely that any near-term boom in these special industries or in general business looms ahead

With business starting the New Year about 25 per cent below computed normal and substantially further below the recent prosperity peak, executives can with a high degree of confidence assume that the relation is behind them, rather than ahead. The risks of going long on commodities and good securities have become minimized. The gross real level of wholesale prices is down 18 per cent from its 1929 peak, which at the time was not considered inflated.

Ninety representative industrial stocks closed 1930 with an average yield of 5.95 per cent, compared with 3.15 per cent at the 1929 summit. Railroad shares give a return of 7.13, compared with 3.84. Utilities offer a return of 4.50, as against 3.65 March 1st the anomaly of stocks offering only slightly more than half of the yield of high grade bonds has been adjusted, and bonds, as is fitting, offer a distinctly low return at present

These indices show the extent to which the water has been squeezed out of the financial situation. They point to the approach to normal terrain on which the new prosperity of the future can gradually be erected. Security buyers must once begin to think analytically of plans for reorganizing estates which have shrunken from the ravages of panic Until prosperity dawns again, term life insurance, serving the purpose of shrinkage insurance, served a useful emergency role.

Sound futures have frequently been built on the gray ashes of depression Faith in the future of America is more likely to yield dividends when faith in a single commodity, rather than when overconfidence is rampant.

The country and the world have already gone far toward correcting the economic blunders, and the cumulative force of the brains of management everywhere is directed toward economic recovery

COUSINS GIVES VIEWS ON BUSINESS

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, Jan. 5 — American business and financial leaders are confident that an era of recovery and general prosperity will replace the depression which has existed in important sections of American industry with more or less severity since the middle of 1929.

Though the business pendulum swung sharply downward this year signs were not lacking at the year-end of the laying of a firm foundation for an upturn of major proportions in steel output, automobile manufacturing, building construction and other representative industries

The severity of the decline itself and the fact that it has continued for the "regulation period" of about sixteen months, is one of the chief arguments for the ushering in of a more active period in business. Every such period increases the consumption of raw and manufactured goods which had accumulated during the preceding one. When these have been used up, there is no alternative but to set to work to produce more.

ENVIABLE RECORD

America has behind her an inspiring record of industrial progress. Her banks and other financial institutions are in the strongest position in her history with a large supply of gold at their command

Inventories of raw and manufactured goods are at low figures, credit and transportation facilities are in excellent condition for efficient service, and our industrial leaders have lost not the smallest bit of their confidence and courage

It is much more pleasant to reflect that many more men are at work at higher wages today than in any of the previous depressions, than to remind ourselves that more than 4,000,000 men are out of work at this time. The willingness of men of all ranks to extend relief and aid to the unemployed and the determination of federal and state officials to appropriate funds for public works of all kinds in order to provide work, has gone a long way toward relieving the suffering and discomfort among those who have lost their jobs, either temporarily or permanently.

DEPRESSION WORLD-WIDE

The severity of the business depression this year was accentuated by the worldwide collapse in prices of the fall in silver, the buying power of 500,000,000 orientals has been curtailed. Recovery of coffee in South America, rubber in Malay and the Islands of the Pacific, tea in India and Ceylon, wool in Australia, copper and lead in America, cotton in Egypt and the United States, wheat and other foodstuffs in Canada, Argentine and America have likewise suffered from the severe contraction in the prices of the commodities offered for sale in the world's markets.

Financial difficulties in important sections of the world, which may have a very direct bearing on the business depression in some countries, make the forecasting of the future extremely difficult. Bankers returning from Europe have hinted at the likelihood of an international settlement of reparations and war debts to each other and German bankers have quite frankly hinted at the possibility of a moratorium in reparations payments as permitted under the terms of the Young plan. Such an interruption would curtail for the time being the payments of war debts to Uncle Sam by Britain, Italy, France and other European debtors.

On the theory that it is always darkest just before the dawn, our leaders of finance and business look hopefully to the ending of the depression within a reasonably short period and probably in the first quarter of 1931. Many of them have placed their orders for raw materials and adjusted their machinery of production with that in view.

Outlook Is Good for Electricals

The year 1931 opens in the Eastern district with encouraging aspects for sizable electrical equipment business and it is generally expected that the early months of the year will show a definite trend upward. Electrical World reports

Year-end business in the district was more satisfactory than had been anticipated, both from central stations and industrial quarters Inquiries, also, were in better volume.

Chicago Banker Finds 'U. S. Sound

Chicago, Jan. 5—Chairman Frederick M. Rawson of the First National Bank says:

"The country is fundamentally sound and the large potential purchasing power existing within our own boundaries when exercised should lead to an early recovery."

"Concentrate"

That Wins Battles in War, and BIGGER Battles in Business.

This historic poster by the brilliant artist, James Montgomery Flagg, was first published in 1916, when America was preparing for war.

It was broadcast over the land in 1917 and 1918, when America was AT war.

And now the Boston Evening American is re-broadcasting it over the city, state and nation as a powerful weapon to win the war we are all fighting today—the war against depression.

This country has never lost a war, whether against enemies in the field or enemies in the mind.

The campaign of 1931 is not waged against enemies in the field, but against those far more baffling enemies—the mental slacker, the pessimistic objector, the straggler, the shirker, the knocker.

They can be conquered only by CONCENTRATING AT THE VITAL POINTS.

"I gets the mostest men there the firstest."

And "there" means the place where every ounce of your effort will count, the crucial point where your massed battalions will smash through the enemy's line and on to victory.

CONCENTRATE ALL YOUR EFFORT WHERE IT WILL DO THE MOST GOOD IN 1931.

Patient Investors Will Again Reap Harvest

By ALFRED CODMAN

of Whitney & Elwell

A recent remark to the effect that our troubles are due to over-prediction rather than overproduction may be facetious, but it is particularly appropriate to statements at the beginning of this new year. To begin with, nobody knows or can know what will happen in 1931.

One can only make a guess. The probabilities are that 1931 will show a slowly increasing trend in business that will gather strength as the year goes on, and that in 1932 a very good volume will be in evidence which should be entirely satisfactory by the autumn of that year. In any case it is only a question of time. We shall surely recover from this depression as we have from all others.

An encouraging factor today is that the country as a whole is now more willing than before to face facts. Too much optimistic propaganda has proved to be a boomerang and therefore deterrent to business recovery. Also, artificial efforts to stimulate business and control prices are of very doubtful permanent value. Business will recover as usual if left to itself.

Too much has been written about the prevailing pessimism. It is entirely natural at such times as the present. But not all people are pessimistic by any means.

Many hard headed business men and corporations as well as investors, while not over-enthusiastic, are quietly and purposefully laying their plans for the future, with every intention of emerging from this depression, as they have from others, with better prospects and organizations, to say nothing of increased fortunes.

As to the security markets it is entirely safe to say that the shrewd, experienced and patient investor will again reap a harvest as he always has in such times. Bonds will buy bonds at present attractive levels, but far more will invest in common stocks of the leading corporations of the country

Once in seven years, more or less, extraordinary opportunities to buy such issues are offered. The present is such an opportunity; nor will there be another one for some years. The investor or speculator should take time and trouble and advice.

Quite plainly there are adverse factors, but there always are at such times Very low prices for commodities, depression all over the world, high tariff walls, troubles of the farmer, farm board policies, Congressional interference, and unemployment are all mixed up in the situation. But most of these have been with us before. How about the favorable factors? Capital and labor are not at odds as they have been in the past. Our banking situation as a whole was never so sound. Money is easy, inventories low, and corporations well financed—how different from 1920-21!

At exactly what time the low point in business and the stock market occur it is never possible to tell until afterward. To all intents and purposes both are at or near the low now. No great harm will be done if somewhat further lows are witnessed.

To buy good securities somewhere near bargain prices is as much as any one can hope for. Of those who profited so materially by buying in the depressions of 1896, 1907, 1914, 1920-21, one wonders how many bought at the low point or even close to it. In 1929 the pendulum swung very high. It is now completing its reverse. Of course the next swing will be up again, and no one knows how far.

Confidence In New England Is Justified

By FRANK H. MELOON

Financial Editor Boston Evening American

Boston and the rest of New England are justified in expecting 1931 to bring a reasonable degree of recovery for finance and business.

Such a recovery cannot be expected to follow the calendar. The year 1930 will go down in history as one of depression, scant volume of production and low profits, if any, for many industries.

Most executives will be glad to know that 1930 is behind them and not ahead, but they will also realize that the calendar is merely an arbitrary measurement of time and cannot of itself bring about the desired restoration of prosperity.

This restoration will be achieved only by constructive leadership. Under such leadership, we may expect 1931 to see better business for our basic industries, which in turn will spread tangib'e improvement over broad areas.

In our financial and business review a year ago we pointed out that over-production was the blackest cloud on the horizon. Over-production during 1930 was absorbed at the expense of production.

The result is that things generally are on a much better basis than they were a year ago. There is still a good deal of overproduction remaining for 1931 to take care of, but numerous lines are in a clearer atmosphere than that which encased them at the outset of 1930.

A great many New England plants today are producing on a basis of consumer necessity The latest available measure of productive activity in manufacturing establishments is that of consumption of electrical energy. This showed for the month no more than seasonal gain for New England and for the country as a whole

The gain in New England was better than that for the rest of the country, by this measure, and the moderate decline of produced goods distribution, as shown by the incomplete barometer of carloadings, was less for New England than for the United States as a whole.

BACKBONE OF RECOVERY

Undoubtedly wholesalers and retailers have been buying cautiously. They have been waiting to see just where the decline in prices of various commodities will be definately checked. There is little doubt but what the lowest prices have been scraped in some lines.

There is a general agreement of opinion among outstanding leaders that 1931 will bring marked improvement. The exact time when the "prosperity train" will start rolling out of Station Despondency is the point about which doubt exists. Some say it will be early soon, others are talking about "spring revival" and still others think we will find general betterment on every hand by the end of the first half of the year.

That the recovery will be slow and irregular in its early stages is to be expected in the light of past experiences. A combination of mixed trends, replacing steady declines, always tends to restore general confidence, which is the backbone of any recovery.

The 1930 decline in commodity prices has generally been a very poor set of figures for statistical comparisons, one which will tend to confusion when carelessly handled.

A late report from Bradstreet's, for example, indicates that the volume of distribution of merchandise was equal, for the December holiday season, to that of a year before, although 10 to 30 per cent below it in cash value Most of the statistical services offer comparisons by cash value alone, which gives a false idea of the situation.

PROCESSES SLOW

That carloading figures are not to be taken by themselves is further indicated by Bradstreet's, and this is a fact to which we have frequently called attention,—when it says that wholesale trade consisted largely of quick delivery for filling orders.

These quick deliveries certainly did not show in carloadings. They went either by delivery express or to the automotive rivals of the iron rails. No figures of automotive loadings are yet available, although it is entirely within the range of possibility that, supplementing the carloading figures, they would convert many a week's reported decline in goods shipments into an actual gain

The Federal Reserve has launched a $5 billion money pool from which too much should not be expected immediately. Most good curative processes are slow

Without belittling the importance of foreign trade, let us remember that Uncle Sam is still his own best customer" Building the home markets will surely be the most important "building program" of the year

The economic revival at home does not need to await recovery abroad. Improvement will not but our own affairs are of first importance. The writer has the idea that the prosperity revival in the United States would be a factor of first importance in setting many other nations on their feet be limited by geographical boundaries. Of course we all hope to see other nations prosper.

What industry will lead the recovery? Some New England leaders think it may be the textiles, others say iron and steel, while there building. The automotive industry is picked by many, because of the known growing need for very numerous replacements.

Some predict good improvement for the petroleum industry, copper, agriculture, the railroads and the securities markets. So many arrows of guesses shot into the air must fall somewhere, and may be hoped to fall somewhere near the target.

Again let us suggest that prosperity can be attained only by constructive leadership, widely available and general cooperation.

GOVERNMENT IS BIG AID

By FRANK D. COMERFORD

President, New England Power Association

The return of prosperity is very largely in the hands of various governments, federal, state and municipal While huge construction programs appeal to the imagination, they are apt to defeat their own purpose if the money is spent on non-productive and non essential projects, for the increases in taxation will only delay a restoration of normal business conditions.

Continued interference by governmental agencies in private business will also tend to retard industrial activity. In times like this the government should encourage private initiative and thus directly bring benefits to the public.

The electric industry is constantly benefitting the public by providing new and increasing uses of its product, by gradual reduction of its cost, and by furnishing employment on new construction. This industry with proper encouragement by the government can do more to regain prosperity than can governments themselves by great expenditures of money.

The prosperity of the electric industry rests on the confidence of the investor. This confidence is in danger of being shaken.

I believe, however, that if some cooperation can be established between this industry and the government, so that private initiative and capital are encouraged to build for the future as they always have done in this country, there will be a return to normal conditions.

Artificial Silk Raised in Mexico

Unofficial experiments in agriculture by professors and students of the public school of Villa Ahumada, Chihuhua, are said to be proving that it is possible to establish the silk industry in northern Chihuahua, and that both the soil and climate are favorable, according to a report from Vice Consul Robert T. Cowan, made public by the Department of Commerce.

December Store Sales Up 12 P. C.

Neisner Bros., Inc., the first of the chain store systems to issue its 1930 sales figures, shows a gross volume of $16,508,057 for the year, against $15,092,420 for 1929, an increase of $1,413,636 or 9.3 per cent. For December, 1930, sales totaled $3,024,790 against $2,589,624 in December, 1929, and increase of $335,166 or 12.4 per cent.

The Promise of a New Year

Since the year in which Harris, Forbes & Company was founded, 1882, the country has passed through a number of periods of business and financial depression. These have been of varying intensity and duration, but in every instance the nation has emerged from these temporary economic reactions stronger and sounder than ever before.

We face the New Year with the strong conviction that the future holds great promise and will bring rich rewards to those who have confidence in the stamina and courage of the American people.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Commission houses, encouraged by the market's push through the highs that followed the December recovery, are rather undecided as to the real nature of the market's rally last week but were nevertheless somewhat impressed by its extent.

It was pointed out that the recent strength of bonds was an important development, since no real recovery in stocks could be expected until the market for coupon-bearing securities had shown sustained improvement

Auburn Shorts Are Squeezed in Rise

Auburn Auto shorts were squeezed today by a 6-point rise in that stock to 146, but the bulance of the motor stock group was disappointing in their market action. The rails, coppers, sugars, tobaccos and other important groups were stationary and motionless most of the session.

Gas and Electric Issues Act Well

Through most of today's market the strength and activity of the gas and electric light stocks, as well as the utility holding company shares, was in line with last week's final movement, which was led by the utilities.

United Corporation reached a new high on the move at 19½, up about 4½ points from the bottom of the last slump, and slight advances were recorded most of the day for Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas, North American and Public Service of N. J

Rail Confidence Aided by Plans

The agreement of the trunk line heads on a merger plan, brought about through intervention of the administration, and the principal details of which have now been published and laid before the Interstate Commerce Commission, has gone far to restore a greater degree of confidence in the railroad outlook. In considerable measure at least, it offsets the currently unsatisfactory result of railroad operations and discouraging car loadings report

Montgomery Ward Cash Volume Off

Montgomery, Ward & Co. report December sales decreased 19 91 per cent in cash volume against those of a year ago, while the year's decrease was only 6.59 per cent Such a comparison does not take into account the lower prices at which commodities were sold, and it is likely that the company's goods tonnage showed a gain over 1929

Whip Is Cracked Over the I. C. C.?

While the railroad merger plans will have to undergo careful scrutiny by the Interstate Commerce Commission and may be subject to attack in Congress, there seems to be a disposition on the part of a majority of the commissioners to expedite matters as much as possible, and there is also some feeling of confidence in Washington that the project has a good chance of going through. Some brokers say it looks very much as if a big Washington figure might be cracking the whip over the I. C. C. While it will by no means solve all railroad problems it should eventually help to cut operating costs in the East and assist the railroads in meeting other forms of competition.

Brokers' Loans Prove Deflation

Whether the increase in brokers' loans in the week ended Dec. 30, last—coming as it did after 12 successive weeks of decline—marks a definite turn in the tide, remains to be seen. Nevertheless, it is noteworthy that the current total of brokers' loans of $1,926,000,000 compares with a total of $4,101,000,000 on June 4 and a peak in October, 1929, of $6,804,000,000. The figures speak for themselves in indicating the extent to which "deflation" has run.

In other lines, also, has the public adjusted its debts. Instalment sales' balances have been reduced while new purchases have been abstained from. In the meantime shoes, clothing, houses, automobiles, etc., have been depleted. The time is fast approaching when once again we must face a "sellers' market." The longer the delay, the greater must be the volume of purchases once it appears.

Pennsy's Demand Needs Arbitrators

Adjudication of Pennsylvania Railroad's demand for trackage rights over Nickel Plate, in proposed four-system consolidation, will require service of two and possibly three arbitrators selected from outside railroad field, it is believed in railroad circles. A hard-fought contest between two roads is considered inevitable. Nickel Plate is leaving it to two roads to work out the matter. Rights desired by Pennsylvania would give it a route south of Lake Erie from Brocton, N. Y., to Toledo, a distance of more than 300 miles

Traction Price Is Still in Question

The impasse in regard to the difference in price Samuel Untermyer, special counsel for New York in transit matters, is willing to recommend that the city pay for the Independent companies, and the spokesmen for the companies are willing to accept, still exists, Mr. Untermyer stated

The deadlock is over the price concession which Mr. Untermyer insists the companies must make. These concessions involve recessions from the companies spokesmen's stand that the city under the unification plan should assume liability for the judgments and claims for personal injuries outstanding against them and that the city assume arrears of taxes and current unfunded liabilities in excess of their liquid assets. In the case of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation, this involves about $10,000,000.

No estimate has been made as to how much this would mean to the Interborough Rapid Transit or the Manhattan Railway.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

It is the contention of a large Boston wire house that a powerful banking group are grooming the market for the flood of investment funds that are sure to be released by January dividend and interest payments. They expect the next step, following the successful rail plan, will be the announcement of a tremendous increase in the unfilled steel tonnage report.

* * *

Bankers in State st. who are accredited with having a knowledge of the methods of those in control of the market feel that share prices will be carried to a level where any reaction, taking place on the release of poor fourth quarter reports, will not endanger the December lows. When the setback does occur, they believe it will be halted both by dullness and repurchasing of stocks sold to establish tax losses.

* * *

As the bear cycle becomes more commonly accepted as nearing completion, discussions are heard as to when common stocks are a purchase. One broker remarked that to have money and courage at a time such as the present is not an assurance of future profits. To his mind the important thing is to have the ability to differentiate between the equities that have outlived their day and those that are likely leaders of the future

* * *

While the younger class of speculators are quite certain that the country will never come back, the old time traders, who have had experience with and weathered not one but many bear markets, are of a much different opinion. They say it is now time to change from "short stocks on rallies" to "buy on dips" if a successful trading policy is to be followed.

TRUE STORIES OF NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS SUCCESSES. No. 11

DRAWING NEW PROFITS FROM A PRODUCT 100 YEARS OLD

In 1849 a certain New England retailer turned manufacturer. During the years that followed the company at first confined its sales to towns and cities.

Later jobbers covered the larger communities, while the company's salesmen intensively cultivated the smaller ones. But owing to a change in living conditions fewer and fewer housewives used the 100-year-old product in their kitchens.

Between 1913 and 1927 the costs of raw material increased 100%, while the consumer's price only advanced 17%. And competition grew keener every year.

At first the idea seemed too far-fetched to the company's officials — too trivial for general application. But necessity demanded that no stone should be left unturned. A test was made on housewives visiting the company's booth at an annual show. To everyone's surprise the public literally drank it up!

An extensive promotion campaign based upon the new use brought immediate results. Sales jumped up. In the fourth month they increased 27%. Profits steadily mounted.

Are you missing this opportunity?

New uses are doubtlessly awaiting other New England products. In some cases extended investigations may be necessary to discover them; in others a casual suggestion may turn the trick.

As bankers it is beyond our field to undertake extensive investigations. We have, however, made suggestions to several of our clients that have set them thinking and working along totally new lines.

Executives who are facing difficult problems may easily be missing an opportunity if they leave the Shawmut's 94 years of business experience and our thousands of valuable contacts unapped.

Of course we cannot make any definite promises in advance. But we have never been in a better position to help.

Our merchandising Division is always glad to hear from business executives. You can reach us at Hancock 6890. Why not telephone for an appointment? Perhaps Shawmut can help you.

Unusual Opportunities Are Offered, Says Dean

By JAMES DEAN
President of the Boston Stock Exchange.

The present is a time to keep cool and to have in mind that sooner or later business will be better, and that certain bonds and stocks present unusual opportunities for permanent investment.

During a period of falling stock prices such as we are now having, in the aggregate a great amount of stocks are taken out of the market by the small investor, who pays in cash for such purchases. This buying is undoubtedly going on today and so the odd-lot investor becomes an important factor in the ultimate stabilization of stock prices and a better market to come

After forced liquidation in the stock market has run itself out, I expect the first sign of real revival will come in the bond market, which has always been a reliable financial and business barometer. A broad and advancing bond market is a healthy sign and stocks follow along after. It may be some time after, according to business improvement.

Mindful of conditions outlined above, the Boston Stock Exchange has made a distinct advance in the handling of odd-lot transactions and now offers to the public unexcelled facilities for purchases or sales of active investment shares listed in New York and Boston. Its officers are also giving a most careful study to the mechanics of handling an increased bond business, feeling that the Boston Exchange can and should provide a natural market place for a wider number of bond issues in which New England capital is interested

But no matter what facilities stock exchange may have, capital rises in large measure in proportion to business prosperity in general and as to general business I look forward with hope and confidence to the future. We have traveled a large part of the road that has to be traveled before business throughout the land can improve and the sun shine again.

Able and thoughtful men, leaders of the country over are giving their best efforts to the solution of our problems The recuperative powers of the country are great and ultimate improvement is a foregone conclusion.

But be assured of one thing, we can no longer trade pieces of paper with each other at constantly advancing prices regardless of values, that bubble has burst and we must all go back to intelligent and effective work and by industry and saving accumulate real wealth

For only so can we best help ourselves and help make employment for others

Dupee Looks for Increase in Bank Deposits for '31

In the present era of abnormal conditions, under which all persons appear to count for nothing, he who attempts to predict is more than likely to find himself mistaken, according to William Arthur Dupee, treasurer Provident Institution for Savings.

However it would seem that the larger and stronger metropolitan savings banks may expect increased deposits during the coming half year. The safety and security afforded by such banks appear now to have a stronger appeal than the hope of gain

Then, too, the spirit of thrift born of fear, tends to restrain spending for other than the necessities of life. Thus, with upwards of now relatively small [illegible] are likely to remain so at least until the present depression of general business is over and well on its way towards recovery.

There will be ample funds for sound and safe mortgages but mortgages will be searchingly scrutinized and carefully selected Cooperative banks of savings banks, insurance companies and ruling rates are unprofitable.

There would appear likely that they must resort to the bond market to keep funds employed This latter form of investment, in Massachusetts at least, with its burdensome tax on savings banks and narrowly restricted field, is pursuing to the executive and board of investment who are responsible for a fair return to depositor

To sum up, I think we may expect increased deposits and a [illegible] demonstration of the useful function of the mutual savings bank and that controlling officers will find their problem not one of how to maintain deposits, but rather how to maintain ruling rates of dividend

EMPLOYE CAN HASTEN TURN

By SIDNEY RABINOVITZ
Treasurer Economy Grocery Stores Corporation

A great deal has been written regarding the retarding influence of fear during the present depression, but little has been said as to the cause and possible cure.

If big business creates uncertainty among its workers as to the stability of their employment, fear and the hoarding of earnings naturally follows.

It is quite obvious that the major market of industry is the working class. Employers of labor must generate confidence among those who, through regular employment, are the makers of prosperity if they themselves would flourish.

As some lines of business lag, the burden of recreating public confidence rests with those concerns able to operate, not necessarily at a profit, but without loss. It is their duty to manifest their confidence in the future of the country through the maintenance of present wages and the assurance of regular employment.

The employe in turn should express his faith in his employer by using a fair proportion of his wages for purchases of goods that will accelerate production in the trades of his fellow workers.

In this way, industry and labor, each dependant on the other, will not only halt the decline but stabilize and turn business upward.

Perhaps the most cheering development at the start of the new year is the willingness of many New England industrialists to take the first step and assure labor of constant work without a reduction of wages.

Irving Trust Co. Report Is Given

New York, Jan. 5—Irving Trust Co. earned $9,849,000 during the year ended December 31, 1930, equal to $2.83 a share on the 3,480,000 shares outstanding, against $4.61 a share in 1929.

Tonnage of Food Handled by Chains Is Increased

By CHARLES F. ADAMS
Treasurer of the First National Stores

At the present time, our dollars and cents volume is slightly lower than at the same period last year but this is due entirely to the much lower food prices now prevailing in comparison with 12 months ago. We have been handling a much larger tonnage, which indicates we have added substantially to our customer clientele and our customers are securing for their dollar, at least 15 to 20 cents greater value than a year ago.

As many articles of food are at the present time returning the average original producer but cost of production, or less, it is inevitable that once general business commences to improve, certain readjustments upward in the prices of foodstuffs will simultaneously occur, provided that an over supply does not hinder special advances.

LOWER LEVEL OF COSTS

There is little doubt that food costs will for years remain on a much lower level than heretofore. As a rule, customers are buying conservatively and only their current requirements.

The sales of First National Stores, Inc., for the 11 months ending Nov. 22, 1930, were $98,930,184, as compared with $88,860,499 for the like period of 1929, or 11.3 per cent. increase. The dividend rate on our common stock was increased from $1.50 per share, per year, to $2.50 per share commencing Jan. 1, 1930, and this dividend has been earned and paid and our surplus and surplus reserves have been increased approximately two million dollars.

PRICES ADJUSTED

Our inventory and retail prices have been promptly adjusted during the year to correspond with current values, so that while the steady decline in commodities may have occasioned inventory shrinkages and losses to manufacturer, tradesman and producer, this has been added to the consumer's pocketbook and is directly reflected.

FACE 1931 WITH CONFIDENCE

By C. NORMAN FAY

"Regardless of the fact that depression has been more severe than anticipated we feel that 1931 should be faced with confidence," says C. Norman Fay, manager of the Elliott Addressing Machine Co.

"In many ways industry has coped with this depression more successfully than ever before. In 1930 sales of this company were 90 per cent of those in 1929, but due to improved manufacturing and distributing methods the earnings ratio has been higher than ever before.

"Examination of other factors reveals commodity prices at what should prove to be rock bottom. Again, Christmas buying has helped to diminish inventories and low stocks of manufactured and raw goods must be replenished at an increasing rate as consumption continues to exceed production.

"Present low money rates will undoubtedly remain low during the year, and contribute to the betterment of business. Because of these fundamental points of strength 1931 may be looked to for a return to normal.

Confectionery Has Comfortable Year

Pres. E. B Hutchins of the National Confectioners' Association says:

"Comparatively speaking, the confectionery industry has not suffered severely from the business discomforts of the past year. Sales, in dollars, as reported to the Department of Commerce for the first ten months of 1930, fell only 5.7 per cent below the same period of 1929, which was a banner year. In point of quantity the American people probably are eating as much candy as they did a year ago."

$1,081,000 Earned by Bank of New York for Year 1930

New York, Jan. 5—Bank of New York & Trust Co. earned $1,081,000 during the year ended Dec. 31, 1930, equal to $18.01 a share on the 60,000 shares outstanding, against $36.20 a share in 1929.

Commercial National Bank & Trust Co. earned $1,402,000 during the year ended Dec. 31, 1930, equal to $17.17 a share on the 70,000 shares outstanding.

Grace National Bank earned 394,000 during the year ended Dec. 31, 1930, equal to $6.27 a share on the 15,000 shares outstanding, against $28 a share in 1929.

Crude Petroleum Prices Unchanged

New York, Jan. 5 (AP)—Average price of crude petroleum in 10 producing fields was unchanged last week from the previous week at $1.245 a barrel, Oil, Paint & Drug Reporter says. The average for the corresponding period last year was $1.612 a barrel. Gasoline was reduced at East Coast Refineries but was lower at the Midcontinent and the average at four refining centers was unchanged from the preceding week at 5.31 cents a gallon.

Bond Buying Goes Into the Foreigns

New York, Jan. 5—The buying movement that has buoyed domestic bond prices spread today to the foreign section. Leading government issues in but little European and Latin groups were generally higher, contrasting with the uncertain movement that has prevailed in that group for some time, reflecting the uncertainty of investors over the economic and political outlook abroad.

North American's Dividend Ordered

North American Gas & Electric Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents in cash, or 1-40th of a share of class "A" stock on the class "A" stock, payable Feb 1 to stock of record Jan. 15.

SPECTATOR'S VIEWS GIVEN

By SPECTATOR

However, it has proven rather disastrous for market followers to lay too much stress upon mere technical factors as experience time and time again over the past year has demonstrated. Thus, while all indicators point to higher prices over the next few days at least, it would take little in the way of adverse to turn the tables the other way. The market has had an abundance of good news to assist it of late, particularly developments of a constructive nature in connection with the Eastern Trunk Line situation, the consistent strength in bonds, the sharp decline in call money to 1½ per cent and the improvement in the commodity markets.

Dismal Earnings

If it passed through the batch of dismal earnings statements for 1930 in the same style, it may really be that the turn has finally come.

The indicated 1930 earnings of the following 15 leading railroads fail to meet dividend requirements for the year: St. Louis-San Francisco, $4.70 earnings indicated against dividend requirements of $6; Missouri-Kansas-Texas, $1.40 earnings against $3 dividend; Southern Railway, $5.20 earnings against $8 dividend; Pittsburgh & West Virginia, $5 earnings against $6 dividend; Chicago, Northwestern, $3.20 earnings against $4 dividend; Boston & Maine, $3.20 against $4; Canadian Pacific, $2.25 against $2.50; Colorado & Southern, $2.50 against $3; Lackawanna, $3.90 against $6; Illinois Central, $5.30 against $7; Lehigh Valley, $3.30 against $3.50; Louisville & Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, Chattanooga & St. Louis, $4.80 against $5; New York Central, $7.70 against $8, and Pere Marquette, $2.70 against $3.

It is stated, however, that Canadian Pacific and New York Central may cover dividends through increase in non-operating income attained by drawing extra distributions.

HARVARD VIEW ON BONDS IS CHEERFUL

The Harvard Economic Society in its letter of this week says in part:

"Such influences (as caused the recent decline in bond prices) are not peculiar to this depression; and past depressions have occasionally shown a secondary reaction in bond prices, such as the recent decline appears to have been. At present the sharp rally has brought the downward movement to at least a temporary halt, while the recent reductions of rediscount rates and the approach of the period of surplus funds after the turn of the year are favorable to improvement.

"For prime bonds, therefore, the low point of 1929 seems to have been the turning point of a cyclical movement, and the recent slump a temporary—though severe—interruption of the upward swing."

BEAR COVERING CUTS LOSSES IN WALL ST.

New York, Jan. 5—The stock market had to absorb a lot of profit-taking in an irregular session today. It closed with most of the leaders off a point or two.

Prices made their lowest levels in the final hgalf-hour, but short covering in the last 10 minutes sharply reduced the extreme declines of 1 to 4.

CHANGES ARE MIXED

Issues losing about 2 points net included Atchison, American Water Works, Foster Wheeler, DuPont and Allied Chemical. American Smelting, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Electric, Nash Motors, Union Carbide, North American and Safeway Stores finished about a point under Saturday's close.

Isolated stren gtheses included Johns-Manville, which ran up 4 points, and American Tobacco and Auburn B. Both added 3 each. National Biscuit and Pennsylvania gained fractionally. Lambert rallied 2.

Trading was in light volume. Although trade and industrial news was moderately encouraging, the market is less anxious to count its eggs before they are hatched than it was early in 1930.

The beginning of the first full week of the year brought news of resumption of activity by many manufacturing plants, notably those of Ford Motor Company and the R. C. A.-Victor Company. The tendency was toward increased output in the steel mills.

PRICE-CUT FACTORS

Notable items of corporate news were the final sales reports of the mail order houses. Sears Roebuck reported a drop in the final period of its 13-months calendar of 22½ per cent from 1929, against a drop of 20.8 in the 12th period. Montgomery Ward reported for December a reduction from 1929 of 15.9 per cent against 24.9 in November. For the year, Sears showed a reduction of 11.6 per cent, and Montgomery Ward 7.6. Price reductions and one less Saturday in November than in December, 1930-1929, are factors to be considered in these comparisons.

The modification of packers' consent decree was considerably less than that sought by the packers, for it only permits them to enter other merchandise than meats, and does not permit them to go into retail selling.

It was felt in financial quarters that the use of their distributing facilities to handle other products than meat would be beneficial. Whether the packers will appeal the continued prohibition against retail distribution remained to be seen.

In the metal markets, an adverse factor was the continued decline in silver. The metal touched a new historical low at 29¾ cents an ounce. This contrasts with an average price of 56.2 cents in 1927-29.

China, which still uses silver as a monetary base, has been considered as a solution, but recent political disturbances there has been an obstacle.

Swedish Match Will Raise $52,000,000

The first new securities issue of 1931 and, in fact, one of the largest pieces of corporate financing in many months was announced today by the board of directors of the Swedish Match Company of Stockholm. The company, which controls approximately 75 per cent of the match business of the world, plans to increase its share capital from 270,000,000 Kroner to 360,000,-000 Kroner (or 180,000 and to sell an issue of 60,000,000 Kroner shortly. The total amount of new money thus raised will be in excess of $52,-000,000.

Woolworth Report for Year Is Given

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—Dollar sales of F. W. Woolworth Co. for 1930 showed a decline of 4.5 per cent from figures for the previous year and December sales were 4.8 per cent below those of December, 1929.

The total for 1930 was $280,285,-552, compared with $303,034,223 for 1929. Sales last month totaled $42,-219,776, against $44,153,724 for December of 1929.

Steel Subsidiary Gets Large Order

Louisville & Nashville has placed contracts for 4,000 tons of steel rails and 10,000 tons of rail accessories with Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation.

PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By JAMES J. DELANEY

With the first of the fishing fleet arriving at the Fish Pier with excellent catches and reports of wonderful weather on the grounds, the market gave every indication of being a record breaker today.

Seven schooners which were checked in for the Monday market brought a total catch that neared 200,000 pounds.

The Lerths had 40,000 pounds; the Waltham II, 30,000 pounds; the Gertrude Parker, 30,000 pounds; the William Putnam, 25,000 pounds; the Cathrine Gaffen, 16,000 and the Zuntoro II, 25,000 pounds.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

As a result of a report made to the Boston Port authority, claiming that the practice of producing of ocean bills of lading before shipments are delivered "is burdensome, excessive and unnecessary," a public hearing will be held on the matter in the Custom House Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock. The hearing will be held by the Port Authority.

Our Right of Appeal

Labor Should Take Dispute to Legislature

Why the Boston Central Labor Union feels it must go traipsing down to Washington to secure redress for the discharge of Miss Connolly by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company is beyond comprehension; that is, unless it demonstrates an utter lack of confidence in the public officials of this commonwealth.

Miss Connolly was an employe of the local corporation and she happened to be Treasurer of the Boston Central Labor Union at a time when that body decided to petition the State for a review of telephone rates charged the consumers.

The evidence shows she neither urged nor opposed the adoption of labor's resolution for the rates review. She engaged in none of the discussions. She was one of the officers instructed by the union to deposit the petition with the State officials. And for that reason she was discharged, the company claiming she was guilty of an act of disloyalty to it.

And it is on those facts that the issue ought to be decided in this commonwealth.

The issue involves the right of petition of the citizens of Massachusetts. If that right is to be abrogated by public utility corporations, many thousands of Massachusetts citizens are doomed to be punished in the future or forfeit the right of their franchise and petition. And public utility corporations ought to be the first to recognize those rights and the last to curtail or impair them because public utility corporations are operating under franchises or charters granted them by the people; they are performing services and making profits as the result of special rights conferred upon them by the public.

With respect to the right of petition, conferring it upon all the people without discrimination, the Massachusetts Bill of Rights declares:

"The people have a right, in an orderly and peaceable manner, to assemble to consult upon the common good; give instructions to their representatives, and to request of the legislative body, BY THE WAY OF ADDRESSES, PETITIONS OR REMONSTRANCES, redress of the wrongs done them, and of the grievances they suffer."

It was for this right that the Revolution was fought, lives sacrificed and suffering endured.

Perhaps the Central Labor Union can say that they have received shoddy, shabby treatment from the State officials with whom they have thus far consulted and who have demonstrated such insincere disregard of the basic right of citizenship.

But the Legislature is coming into session and organized labor and the telephone officials ought to go before this body of ELECTED representatives and thresh out this matter fully to a final settlement of it.

Pillsbury's Queer Will

$100,000 to Battle Feminism

Former Attorney-General Pillsbury could have been relied upon to write an unique will because he was an unique and interesting man.

He left a fund of $100,000 to combat feminism because he believed this "movement tends to take woman out of the home and put her in politics, government or business, and that this has already begun to impair the family as a basis of civilization."

He left also a fund to be distributed equally among the churches and religious societies of Milford, without distinction of faith, provided each of them shall hold "discourses" annually against war, against intemperance and against cruelty to animals, causes in which his father was interested.

Mr. Pillsbury might have been Governor of Massachusetts. But he preferred to abandon the liberal political philosophy of his youth, and to cast his lot for fortune rather than for fame with the public utility corporations. For them he became the legislative lobbyist, and to the liberal citizens of the commonwealth he became the symbol of legislative and political reaction.

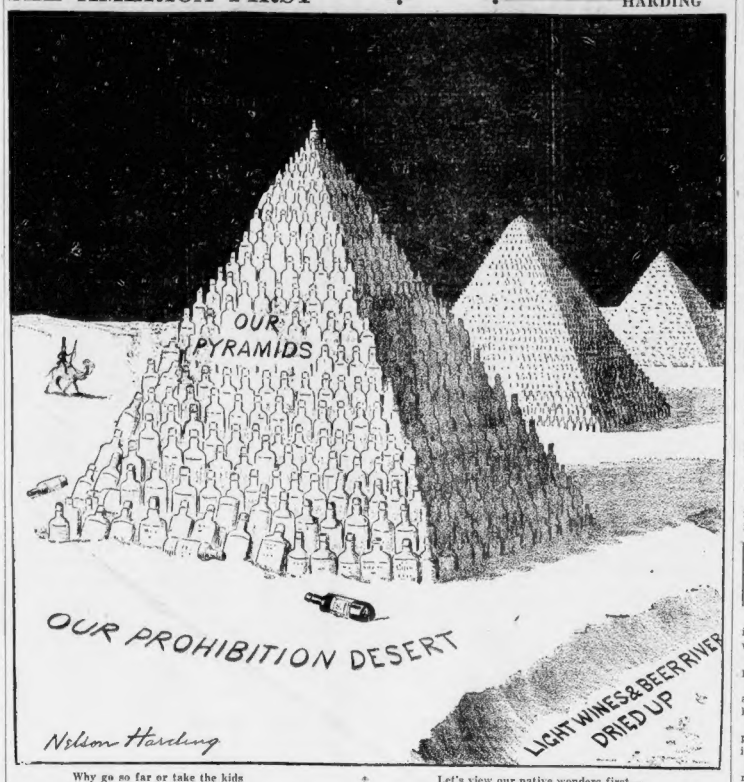
But there were some indefensible governmental restrictions of popular liberty against which his subdued but inherent Yankee idea of personal liberty revolted. Reactionary though he was, he volunteered his eminent legal skill gratis to that "terribly radical" organization, the American Civil Liberties Union, when it sought repeal of the outrageous syndicalist laws which caused hundreds of fine men to be castigated and thrown into prison because they dared to speak out against the horrors of war.

Mr. Pillsbury's archaic notions on feminism which could deprive the stage of a Bernhardt and public life of a Jane Addams will result in the spending of his $100,000 and that is about all it will accomplish.

But the example of his disgust at the violation of personal rights and his determination to contest for them could well be emulated by his wealthy and influential colleagues-at-bar. They grow fat and opulent, apparently unmindful of the frenzy of restrictive, sumptuary laws which encroach upon the few rights left to the public.

SEE AMERICA FIRST -:- -:-

By NELSON HARDING



Why go so far or take the kids
To see the famous pyramids?
Why ancient Egypt's desert roam
When you can see these things at home?

Let's view our native wonders first—
The bottles that now quench our thirst
Are piled in pyramids that stand
All over our own "arid" land.

Listen, World! -:- Costs

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Non-Productive Expenditures

MODERN BUSINESS creates some wise phrases. "Non-productive costs"—that's one of them.

No matter how you run any business, you're up against cost. Continuous cost. Sometimes there's a profit to that outlay. Sometimes there isn't. The trick in good business to make every cost produce.

Elsie Robinson

And that's as true of running life as it is of running a business. Your life is your business. It's a business on which you'll spend everything you have, from your first breath to your last. By no possible contriving can you keep yourself from spending. Everything you do, everything you think, will "take it out of you." But you can so manage that your spending will give you a profit. The trick of wise living is to know which investment is worth while—which isn't.

Take love. You can't have much of a life without love. And love's the most expensive thing there is. It costs constantly. The greater the love, the heavier the price. And many a one will tell you that love costs too much. They'll say you're wasting yourself—but they'll be wrong. Love is always worth all it costs, and much, much more. Love is always a productive cost. You may never be able to show tangible returns. Love may not enlarge your bank roll—BUT IT WILL ENLARGE YOUR SOUL. You will always be richer for having loved, no matter what price you have paid in tears and torment.

But that can't be said of certain other expenditures.

There's hate. Hate often seems as reasonable and necessary as love. We all indulge in it—and we all devote a tremendous amount of time and energy to it. If we could reckon the strength we spend on hate in a life time in actual energy units, we'd probably have enough manpower to build a couple of skyscrapers. But, instead, what do we build? What have we to show for all our fury? Nothing. Hate NEVER produces—AND IT ALWAYS LEAVES YOU IN THE RED.

Self-pity—there's another non-productive cost. Wonderful indoor sport, but what does it buy you?

Remorse—there's another activity that can gouge into your assets. Being sorry for something you've done—and then getting busy and doing something better—that's fine. But to make a vocation of being sorry—to work at it overtime—to gum up the present with lamentations over the past—that's the vicious height of non-production.

And the list hasn't even started. Jealousy — envy — suspicion—conceit—day dreams—consider the amount of time and feeling you've devoted to these indulgences. And what have they bought you? Anything but grief? What would you think of a man who ran his business like that—paying out good gold to maintain leaky roofs and rusty water mains and a thousand nuisances that ate into his capital, giving him no return?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

The Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and Bob Davis came and snap-shotted me at my desk and we tore into a platter of smoked sausage with a gusto. Then to David Adlerblum's to arrange my tax return and how payments will be made I know not.

This day our cousin Josephine arrived from Cleveland with her Boston puppy Dedonne, a log-eared rascal, and my dogs took to him like a cat to cream. So at my scrivening, but Verne Porter came in jittering all wot wrong at Sussex Hall, the old squire was dying, locusts were in the south meadow and other idiocies.

In the evening to the cutting of Dean Palmer's 36th birthday cake and among others there were Mr. and Mrs. Owen Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur William Brown, Mrs. Dean Cornwell and Irvin Cobb. Later to see "The New Yorkers," the comicalities amusing me mightily.

The Dude Ranch is a new night club in the West 50's. The doorman is togged in a two-gallon hat, blue shirt, chaps and properly booted and spurred.. Inside is informality of the ranch house, cowboy songs, dances and other peccadillos of the pampas.

Although boys on his Brooklyn street found Sidney Franklin, home from his triumphs as matador in the Spanish bull rings, extremely democratic, it was agreed he was a different young man. Unconsciously he had acquired old world graces. At his premiere in a vaudeville house he executed quick steps of the arena. A bull fighter's basket of tricks lies in superb posings, in tango-like dodging to one side as the bull snorts by. Frequently there are dainty lifts on tip toe and pirouetting with hand on hip. In the midst of his performance a tough bozo bellowed: "Bull fighter, my eye! He's a pansy!"

Personal nomination for the Rialto's most melancholy looking critic —Percy Hammond. For the happiest looking—Eugene Kelcey Allen.

The underworld grins at the notion Jack Diamond's girl friend will be ostracized by sister chorines, now she has returned to the chorus. Indeed, they say, she becomes a heroine. Lesser gangsters admire her because she was "Jack Diamond's girl." Morals mean nothing in life's under strata. Clothes, jewels and tabloid publicity are the three graces.

In a near Broadway chop house the other evening three extravagantly perfumed, roguishly rouged and buoyantly bunned ladies staggered into a dining booth. They were joined later by one of those sleek, tight-lipped gangsters who clipped out talk in monosyllables. A waiter confided: "All three are nuts over him and each thinks she is his Great Experience. They work in a chorus, give him their dough and think they are putting things over on one another. His real dame is the blond hat check girl." Broadway!

It may be, too, the waiter was romancing. For later in the evening, his face a mirror of candor, he bowed over the table and whispered: "Don't seem to be looking but the lady and gentleman just being seated are Rudy Vallee and and Leonore Ulric!" The lady and gentleman, I happen to know, were nothing of the sort. Come to think of it, I must look the yap. I never thought of getting mad either, until just now. G-r-r-r-r-f

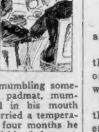
I know a gentleman who had reserved 18 seats for a New York play. After dressing and while waiting for his guests he thumbed a magazine and chanced upon a double page ad. of the star they were to see, endorsing a toilet soap. He immediately switched his reservations to another theatre, the fuss-budget.



The eccentricity of the same gentleman flowered years ago in a contrasting state of optimism. He was being tutored by a Yogi. We ran completely vegetarian and wandered about in a vacant-eyed study mumbling something like "oompi, padmat, mumsey." Life melted in his mouth like butter. He married a temperamental singer. In four months he went back to red-blooded meat, whiskey straight and fierce black cigars. He sent word to friends: "I have given up yogi stuff temporarily to train a wildcat." But he never succeeded.

Over the telephone in Bernard Sobel's bachelor apartment is: "No Paris calls, please."

RAILROAD MERGERS

The following editorial is reprinted from the editorial page of the Boston Evening American of January 13, 1930. It was the first of a series of six dealing with the proposed consolidation of several railroads. It is reprinted because of its timeliness.

THE most important act of the Federal Government in a long time is the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission recommending certain railroad consolidations.

We have too many separate railroads in the country, with expensive and unnecessary duplication of high officials, terminals and services. A weak line that serves its community badly can be made strong by adoption into the family of a powerful and successful system.

Nobody who has the interest of the country at heart can oppose wise railroad mergers. We do not want to hang on to a more expensive way of producing transportation service any more than we want to hang on to a more expensive way of producing motor cars or houses.

What we DO want from Congress and the Interstate Commerce Commission, charged with regulating the railroads, is to be assured that the public shall get its full share of the advantages and economies of those new business combinations.

This means that as the railroads make more money the public must get better service at lower rates. Law and regulation should be devoted to making these public benefits automatic.

If Congress will act in this direction the public will be served; it will not be served by foolish and unprofitable opposition to mergers, which are inevitable since they promise economy and progress.

This, incidentally, is simply a restatement of the long-established policy of the Hearst papers with respect to business combinations and consolidations.

The merger principle in railroad organization must be carried through without hesitation or delay.

Marines in Nicaragua

Eight More Victims of Our Policy

Eight more American marines have been killed by bandits in the wilds of northern Nicaragua, and several others seriously wounded.

The detachment is said to have been ambushed while repairing telegraph lines for the Nicaraguan Government.

These marines would not have been killed if the Hoover administration had required the Nicaraguan Government to keep the promise it made to the Coolidge administration.

That promise was to organize as rapidly as possible a nonpartisan national constabulary that would serve Nicaragua as its permanent national police force.

This constabulary was to be trained and temporarily commanded by American marines.

President Coolidge consented to leave in Nicaragua an additional force of marines until the government elected there in 1928 was firmly established and the organization of the Nicaraguan National Guard completed.

There was a distinct understanding that the stay of this additional force of marines in Nicaragua was to be temporary.

It is now two years since the Moncada government, chosen at an election supervised by an American electoral commission headed by General Frank R. McCoy, was inaugurated.

It is now nearly two years since President Coolidge left the White House.

But more than one thousand enlisted men and commissioned officers of the Second Marine Brigade and Aircraft Squadron are still doing police work for the Nicaraguan Government that ought to be done by the Nicaraguan National Guard.

The eight marines who have just been killed were a part of this additional force which President Coolidge left in Nicaragua with the distinct understanding that its stay should be temporary.

Under President Hoover the tour of duty of these marines has apparently become indefinite. They are not supervising elections or training the National Guard. They are doing the police work that should be done by Nicaraguans.

Against the failure of the Hoover administration to insist upon the Nicaraguan Government's promise to the Coolidge administration being fulfilled, the Hearst newspapers as long ago as last November made the following editorial protest:

"As long as President Hoover permits the Moncada government to use these more than one thousand American marines to chase Nicaraguans, President Moncada will apparently not keep the promise of his government to finance the organization and training and maintenance of a Nicaraguan national guard of sufficient size to maintain order in Nicaragua.

"If all the American marines in Nicaragua, except those actually engaged in training the Nicaraguan National Guard, are not ordered home before Congress convenes, the Committee on Foreign Relations owes it to the American people TO FIND OUT THE REASON WHY."

The killing of eight more American marines by Nicaraguan bandits makes it more than ever the imperative duty of the Committee on Foreign Relations to find out why the Hoover administration has abandoned the Nicaraguan policy of the Coolidge administration, and how long President Hoover is going to permit President Moncada to use American marines as Nicaraguan policemen.

Boston Mourns Joffre

The people of Boston will mourn the death of Marshal Joffre. He came to us with the reputation of dauntless intrepidity and of military skill.

But his appearance was that of "Papa" Joffre, who looked the part of a kindly old gentleman, more concerned in healing or repairing or preventing the hurts of man than in dealing wounds to his fellowman on the battlefield.

France will never know and could never realize the service that Joffre rendered to it. Because, his greatest service was in enlisting the affection of America, which contributed in the end so much to the formation of the vast American army and the organising of the vast American resources which turned the scales of the war and saved France from probable destruction.

She either does not know it or does not appreciate it. Otherwise, she would not have united in the scolding of Uncle Sam as "Uncle Shylock" and she would not have been so remiss in recognising and meeting her honorable debts to this country.
